SAMMARCO GETS QUICK TRIAL

Confessed Murderer Indicted in First Degree for Shooting Policeman

Joseph Sammarco, confessed slayer of Patrolman William G. Clancey, will go on trial for his life Monday, March 1.

The date was fixed by Judge Brown today, after Sammarco had been indicted for first degree murder. District Attorney Pelletier asked for trial on February 16. Thomas F. Shadley, counsel for Sammarco, suggested April 15.

The District Attorney said the case of the government depended entirely on the confession of Sammarco, it should not take the defendant a great while, he added, to inform his counsel of what he said in this confession, made in the presence of six or more persons.

HAMILTON DEFENDS WEDDING

Morgan's Grandson Says Parents Will Yield When They Know More of the Bride

"If a man does not choose his own wife, what is the use of getting married?" [illegible]

This was the attitude, in an interview today, of Lieutenant Laurns Morgan Hamilton, grandson of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, and great grandson of Alexander Hamilton, and who is the hero of a runaway match.

Young Hamilton, who eloped with and was secretly married to Miss Gertrude Warren, despite family objection, added that he might be disinherited but he had made good in the army and could do it elsewhere.

The young bridegroom, who is an aide on the staff of General Edwards, and is to be demobilized

JAMES B. CONNOLLY.

By JAMES B. CONNOLLY,

Boston's noted writer of sea tales, who spent eight months with the American naval forces abroad during the Great War and whose comments on Admiral Sims are based on personal observation.

The British officer from whom all our naval officers, including Admiral Sims, had to take orders, was Admiral Bayly, K. C. B., C. V. O., and so on. Those initials look more imposing than the wearers when you get a close-up of some of them. Our old friend Jellico—Sims' pal—tacks about a dozen of them onto his name and rank.

Bayly reigned like a feudal lord in Queenstown. He was Lord High Admiral of the Navy, General-in-Chief of the mili-

Directs Quick Settlement of Boston Freight Handlers' Strike

Prospects of an immediate settlement of the freight handlers' strike seems bright as a result of action taken by Director-General Hines, who is in Louisville, Ky.

He telegraphed today instructions to the railroad administration in Washington to take steps for a speedy adjustment even to the point of making concessions.

As a result of these orders District Director Percy R. Tood took immediate steps to effect peace. He went into conference with Federal Directors H. R. Pollock and H. M. Biscoe of the Boston & Maine and the Boston & Albany, the two roads affected.

Just what success these steps will attain is uncertain. Representatives of the freight handlers have not been called into conference but it is expected that later they will be.

Mayor Peters, by telegraph today,

NURSE HELD IN 'HOT TUB' DEATH

Mary E. Coumans to Face Trial for Scalding Patient in Sanitarium

Miss Mary E. Coumans, a Newton nurse, was arraigned in the Dedham court today charged with being criminally responsible for the death of Mrs. Mary C. Lotz of Malden.

Miss Coumans is an attendant at a Wellesley sanitarium. Mrs. Lotz was a patient there and was scalded to death in a bathtub on November 11.

Miss Coumans pleaded not guilty and was held in $2,000 for a hearing on February 6.

Mrs. Lotz had been undergoing a hot bath treatment at the sanitarium. On the night of November 11 she was tied in a canvas sack and placed in a tub of hot water. She was found, scalded to death, several hours later.

The report of the inquest into Mrs. Lotz' death stated that the patient died as a result of negligence.

GERMANY ON BRINK OF RUIN; CRASH TO BE FELT THROUGHOUT WORLD

FAMINE IS FEARED IN BERLIN

Fall of Mark to One Cent on Exchange Causes Deep Gloom

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND, Boston American Staff Correspondent.

Berlin, Jan. 30.—Germany is balancing on the very edge of a precipice, above the abyss of national, economic and financial collapse which is certain to be followed by far-reaching international reverberations in the financial world.

The next thirty days, possibly the coming week, will determine whether the war, which was won by America and the Allies in five years, will be completely lost to them in as many months in the early year.

All indications here point to the Versailles treaty revenging itself upon its makers with a rapidity that even the most vengeful German Nationalist hardly anticipated.

The most portentious shadow coming events have cast before them is the new drop of the German mark, which touched 1 cent here and went even lower in Cologne and in Holland, where it dropped to seven-eighths of a cent.

For the first time the confidence of the Germans themselves in their own money is beginning to disappear, as is shown by the wild scramble for foreign money at any price, especially American, Swiss, Dutch, Danish and Swedish.

The talk on the street today is how many days it will be before national bankruptcy is admitted.

Unless outside help comes—and comes at once—the conclusion is inevitable that it will be only a matter of weeks before the governments hits the rocks and breaks up.

Reports from unofficial sources continue to emphasize that the food situation is nearing a catastrophal crisis. The government, however, appears to have adopted the policy of the old regime of not taking the people into its confidence.

WOMEN TO AID DEMOCRATS

Auxiliary Division Organized With Mrs. FitzGerald at Its Head

Michael A. O'Leary, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, announced today the organization of a women's division of the committee for the purpose of enrolling women as active workers in the Democratic party.

Mrs. Susan W. Fitz Gerald of Boston has been selected as head of the new committee, and her assistants will be Mrs. A. Shuman of Boston, vice-chairman; Mrs. Chandler M. Wood of Winchester, treasurer; Agnes Blood of Somerville, secretary, and Gladys W. Bragden of Melrose, field secretary.

The first step taken by Mrs. FitzGerald was the sending of a letter to the chairman of each Democratic city and town committee in the State, informing that women will undoubtedly be able to vote at the November elections and probably at the Presidential primaries in April.

"A great responsibility," Mrs. FitzGerald says, "rests upon all of us who believe in the Democratic party in Massachusetts, namely, to reach the women of the State in order to make them understand these principles that make the party the most effective means of procuring 'government by the people,' and then to enroll them in our party."

shortly, is staying with his bride at the Hotel Somerset.

MET IN PARIS.

"We met in Paris," he said, "while Mrs. Hamilton was engaged in war work and I was serving with Brigadier-General W. W. Harts. Our romance was continued in this country. I knew that my parents would object to my marriage at the present time, alleging my age as an excuse.

"But I had much experience with the world, and my military training was a splendid education. I have the highest praise from all the officers I have served under. So I must have somejudgment. If a man does not choose his own wife what is the use of getting married? I feel my parents will be reconciled to my choice when they know more of my wife.

"We were married in Portsmouth, N. H., not New York, when I took up my duties with General Edwards. Of course, one feels the coldness of parents and especially mother. I believe, though, this will pass away."

TORE-ENTER CIVIL LIFE.

"I expect to return to civil life shortly. This is my own affair. I know what I have done and any man who had my experience would have done likewise."

Mrs. Hamilton, who is reported to be several years the senior of her husband, was formerly the wife of Gregory Warren, a prominent New Yorker. He died two years ago, and she took up war work in Europe.

William Pierson Hamilton, the lieutenant's father, on learning of the affair, cabled to Europe for information. He was informed of the alleged social conquests in Paris, London and Rome of Mrs. Warren. An effort was then made to prevent the marriage. Mrs. Warren was approached on her return to this country, but refused to yield. The parents of young Hamilton then washed their hands of the affair.

appealed to Director-General Hines for a prompt settlement of the strike.

Workers on the New Haven system continue faithful, and it is not thought they will go out at this time. In view of the possibility of settlement, the chances of their quitting seem remote, for it is believed any concessions made to men on the other lines will include them as well.

Director-General Hines took action following the request of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, at which the strike was discussed. A telegram was sent him asking that he intervene at once, and prevent a serious congestion of freight at this port.

The chamber tendered its good offices in an effort to adjust the difficulty. It set forth that the demands of the workers were made in September, and a hearing granted on them in December and urges prompt action.

The American steamer National Brake, enroute to Boston from Pisagua, Chile, with a cargo of nitrates, has been diverted because of the strike. She will be recalled if the strike is settled this week, but is now steaming for New York.

many valuable works or art. The loss was estimated at $1,000,000.

The flames ate through the huge building, causing its collapse. Four persons were injured.

The Vanderbilt gallery was housed in the building and its valuable collection was among those destroyed. An exhibition of the Architectural League also was burned.

Besides the valuable art works which the building contained there were more than 1,000 students studying in the building. Many of these rushed into the street at the first alarm, carrying their easels and pictures.

A dozen artists' models, who had been posing in flimy nothings, were among those who scattered to the street. They did not wait to gather many clothes; some merely wrapped a lace curtain about them and ran.

LEAGUE PROTEST AT TREMONT TEMPLE TO BE ORATORICAL TREAT

WALSH AND REED WILL EXPOSE FALLACIES OF TREATY

A treat is in store for the people of Greater Boston next Wednesday night in Tremont Temple when United States Senators James A. Reed of Missouri and David I. Walsh of Massachusetts train their oratorial guns upon the League of Nations in its present form.

These two great orators will tell the men and women of this section why they are opposing the proposed agreement. They will explain why they have opposed the pact even at the risk of losing prestige with President Wilson and his closest followers.

With the exception of a few seats on the stage platform all seats in Tremont Temple will be free at Wednesday's mass meeting, which will be conducted under the auspices of the Boston American. The doors will open at 7:30 p. m. and those on hand first will secure the best seats. Judging from present indications the hall will be crowded with men and women anxious to hear these two leading Senators expose the League.

Senator Reed's recent verbal attack in the Senate upon Herbert Hoover, as a presidential candidate, will make his address in Boston next week all the more interesting.

Monsignor M. J. Splaine of Roxbury, one of the leading dignitaries of the Catholic Church in this city, regrets being unable to be present. He has planned to be present at important meetings in New York next week which will prevent him from hearing Senators Walsh and Reed.

"I am very sorry that I will be unable to attend," he said to a Boston American reporter. "There is a great deal of hypocrisy about this proposed League of Nations. The American has done a tremendous amount of good in exposing the league. It has been true to its name. It is surprising to see how Americans are sitting idly by and letting their Americanism be taken away from them by law."

Many prominent men and women have accepted invitations to sit on the platform of Tremont Temple. Included among them are Mayor Edward Quinn of Cambridge, Mayor Melvin O. Breath of Chelsea, City Councilors Francis J. W. Ford (president), Daniel W. Lane, David Brickley and Henry E. Hagan; John Morton, Attorney Thomas H. Mahony, Edward F. McSweeney, Attorney Joseph J. Walsh, William Hennessy, William C. S. Healey, George Canty, John H. H. McNamee, president Prudential Trust Company; Mrs. John A. Rooney, Dr. Anna O'Sullivan and the Misses Margaret Foley, Margaret Rooney, Lena Mahoney, Elizabeth Hurley, Alice M. McCarthy, Monica Foley and Veronica Lynch.

Hear Reed Reveal Treaty's Shams Here February 4

February 4 is the date; Tremont Temple the place.

And the reason why the League of Nations should not be is the subject of one of the most important public gatherings ever held under the auspices of the Boston American.

The League of Nations affects the fundamental principles of the United States. In the belief of Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, the gifted orator, who is among its bitterest opponents, and who will be one of the chief speakers at this mass meeting, it would do away with the Declaration of Independence.

Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts will tell why he, like Senator Reed—a Democrat—is against the League. Grenville S. MacFarland will preside. Noted New Englanders will be on the platform as evidence that they are opposed to the covenant.

If you don't know of the issues raised by the League, you can't afford to miss this meeting; if you are familiar with the issues this meeting offers you an opportunity to learn why our leading legislators, educators and thinkers oppose it.

JAMES A. REED.
U. S. Senator from Missouri.

THEFT REVEALS WAR SCANDAL

Arrests and Admissions of Guilt Expected to Involve Many in Robbery

Hartford, Ct., Jan. 30.—The uncovering of a scandal in which a ring of officers and munition makers stole and disposed of Liberty engines is expected following the arrests of Captain Henry S. Hegy of Orangeburg, Ga., Charles A. Wirth, a government inspector, and Daniel D. Gardner, a former workman in a Bridgeport plant.

Two arrests of men in Seymour, Ct., who are believed to have disposed of the motors may be made today. Other persons in different parts of the country may become involved.

The arrest of the three men followed a several months' investigation by members of the Army Intelligence Department. They pleaded guilty to having misappropriated the engines from a Bridgeport factory last Summer. In the United States District Court they were held in $5,000 bonds each for a hearing next month.

As yet the men have been unable to obtain bail. The full penalty for their offence is a fine of $1,000 and imprisonment of two years.

CHARGE PLOT TO LURE BRIDE

Providence Witness Says He Was Paid to Take Her to Roadhouse

Providence, Jan. 30.—Testimony that Walter H. Reeves, who with his wife, is being sued for $25,000 for alienating the affections of his son, Cyril, from the latter's wife, Harriet, offered $1,000 to have the nineteen-year-old bride taken to a road house, was offered in the Superior Court here today.

Ralph Ordway, one of nine witnesses for the 27th wife, asserted on the stand that the elder Reeves, a foreman at the wire works, gave him a check for $150. The elder Reeves understood that Ordway would take Mrs. Reeves to a roadhouse, where her father-in-law would see her, in order that he might obtain evidence for a divorce, Ordway said.

Instead of going to the roadhouse, Ordway testified that he brought the check to young Mrs. Reeves' lawyers, Knauer, Hurley and Fowler, and told them of the matter. The attorneys told the court they would offer the check in evidence.

Witnesses for the young wife testified that she and Cyril Reeves appeared to be a loving couple. Often young Reeves would pause in the middle of washing his automobile, and dash upstairs to hug and kiss his wife, they said. The case will be continued Monday.

Brainard's "Madeline" Case Appeal Denied

New York, Jan. 30.—Clinton T. Brainard, president of the publishing house of Harper and Brothers, who is awaiting sentence upon his conviction of having circulated "Madeline, an Autobiography," alleged to be an obscene book, appealed in vain to Supreme Court Justice Platzek for a certificate of reasonable doubt regarding the conviction in the Court of Special Sessions.

Justice Platzek declared, without entering into the merits of the case, that Mr. Brainard's application was premature, holding that prior to imposition of sentence such an application could not be granted.

Arguing for Mr. Brainard, Francis M. Scott, former presiding justice of the Appelate Division of the Supreme Court, said:

"If we anticipated that Mr. Brainard would receive a suspended sentence we would not be so anxious for this certificate of reasonable doubt.

"We believe an attempt will be made to put him behind the bars, if only for one day. The men who instigated this charge hope they can get him sent to the penitentiary. Then they can only get him 'behind the bars' long enough so he was there their main object will have been accomplished, even though on appeal his innocence is established."

GRIP CASES 318, INCREASE 42

Health Commissioner Woodward Expresses Concern Over Nurse Scarcity Here

Influenza cases throughout the state showed a marked increase, according to the report issued today by the State Board of Health. There are 955 new cases announced, an increase of 185 over the previous day.

A sharp rise in the number of cases reported in the last twenty-four hours marked the influenza situation in Boston. The new cases numbered 318 as against 276 yesterday. Only two deaths were recorded, however, compared with the previous day's record of five.

Health Commissioner Woodward attributed the rise to fluctuations of the disease and said it was of no consequence in view of the low death rate.

"What is giving us more concern is the great scarcity of nurses," he said. "There is great demand for them and to meet it we sent out a letter to every registered nurse in Boston, including graduates and undergraduates, but not received a single response."

The present type of influenza, Dr. Woodward said, runs its course in three or four days and is not followed by complications. In the previous epidemic it frequently terminated in pneumonia from which the death rate was high, he said.

A year ago today there were seventy-seven cases of influenza and ten deaths with nine cases of pneumonia and six deaths. Today's pneumonia records showed ten deaths and nineteen new cases.

WOMAN WITNESS AT EXECUTION

Nellie Bly Sees Hamby Die in Electric Chair; First Case in 20 Years

By International News Service.

Ossining, N. Y., Jan. 30.—Defiant and smoking a cigarette, Gordon Fawcett Hamby, the nerviest prisoner Sing Sing prison has ever known, was electrocuted for murder last night, and his corpse lay upon the marble slab in the prison morgue today. The lips were still parted in the cynical smile he wore as he was strapped in the chair of death.

One woman witnessed the execution. She was Miss Nellie Bly of the New York Journal. It was the first time in more than twenty years that a woman had been allowed to witness an execution in Sing Sing.

Hamby spurned spiritual consolation. He said he thought it would be out of place for any man that had led such a desperate career as his to "seek aid from Heaven at the last." He also objected to wearing a black shirt and tie. So he was led to the electric chair he was attired in a striped black and white shirt.

"Good-by, fellows; I always try anything once," he called cheerily to his comrades in the death house.

In front of the chair Hamby threw away his cigarette and stared at his spectators. His lips parted in a smile and then he sat down.

In six minutes the intrepid bank robber, murderer and prisoner of mystery was a dead man.

To the last he refused to reveal his real name or tell anything of his youth, although he confessed that he had robbed 22 banks, held up two trains and participated in three murders.

Stolen Bonds Will Be Returned to Owners

By International News Service.

Washington, Jan. 30.—Stolen registered Liberty bonds and war stamps amounting in value to several million dollars, recovered by the secret service in a nation-wide cleanup of fake "brokers'" establishments, are to be restored to their rightful owners by the Treasury Department, it was announced today.

Most of the securities seized when federal agents swooped down upon the unsuspecting stamp and bonds collection agencies with search warrants were of large denomination and previously had been recorded as lost or stolen.

From evidence gathered in the general raids secret service officials are confident that many more bonds will be found in safety deposit boxes held by some of the "brokers" or their accomplices as hiding places.

Thus far some of the largest seizures made in the New York and Chicago districts were effected after the alleged "brokers'" private records were examined and clews were obtained showing where stolen bonds, as well as war savings stamps in huge quantities illegally held, were secreted.

Treasury officials today stated that the raids, engineered so quietly over a wide area that the offenders were taken completely by surprise, already had reached the point of a successful roundup of chief violators. The number of violators under arrest is considerably more than 100, including women clerks accomplices.

Railroads Must Return Overcharge of Demurrage Above $2 Rate

By International News Service.

Washington, Jan. 30.—More than $1,000,000 will be returned to wholesale coal dealers by the large railroads under a ruling handed down today by the Interstate Commerce Commission that $2 a day is a reasonable rate for demurrage for cars. The railroads in many sections, particularly New York, had been charging $3 a day and will be compelled to return the excess over $2. The ruling affects principally coal dealers who have paid large demurrage charges.

Potter, father of the lad, have conferred on the matter.

DECLARE U. S. IS SHIRKING

Dodging Her Share of World's Financial Burden, Says London Daily Express

By International News Service.

London, Jan. 29.—Another scathing attack upon the United States was printed by the Daily Express today. The newspaper charges America with "financial hostility and quickly scuttling from her share of the world's burden."

The Express again emphasizes its original declaration that "it is high time for Europe to organize and block the United States from squeezing the European nations any further.

Other London newspapers comment seriously upon the financial situation, but they are less venomous than the Express.

The Express is also authority for the statement that Austen Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, has agreed to meet the organizers of the recent memorial urging an international conference to discuss Europe's financial chaos.

"Until currency conditions in the distressed countries of Europe are satisfactorily dealt with their rehabilition seems impossible," it was declared by Frederick Goodenough, chairman of Barclay's bank. "Any scheme must include Germany and Austria."

MRS. PANKHURST SEES PERIL IN LABOR LAWS

New York, Jan. 30.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, English suffragist, in an interview depreciated the proposed welfare legislation for women which is to be introduced at Albany. In Mrs. Pankhurst's statement, made through the Women's Equal Opportunity League, she said in part:

"Restrictive legislation would destroy the freedom women have gained, would limit production and hamper national prosperity. Women everywhere are looking to the most powerful nations—America among them—to loose the shackles of tradition which have heretofore classed women with helpless children."

RUSH WORK TO REOPEN FERRY

Superintendent of Ferries John F. Sullivan stated today work on the ferryboat Governor Russell was being rapidly pushed by a large force.

It was expected she would be able to go into service late this afternoon. At the latest, he said, she should be back on her route by tomorrow morning. This will mean that the South Ferry, closed since midnight Wednesday, will be in operation again. The news will be welcome to residents of East Boston, who were aroused by the closing of the South Ferry, fearing a handicap, especially in case of a big fire.

Under normal conditions, with both ferries working, it took a fire engine from Boston twenty minutes to respond to a call from East Boston.

'Plebeian' Name Cast Off by Elsie French

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER.
Registered U. S. Patent Office.

New York, Jan. 30.—The new Social Register imparts some very interesting information—but, to my way of thinking, one of the most interesting changes concerns the Paul Fitzsimmonses.

Those taking the trouble to scan society's "Bible" for 1920 will find that the former Elsie French Vanderbilt no longer spells her second husband's name in the above plebeian manner. Indeed, not.

It is now Mr. and Mrs. Paul Fitz Simon, if you please.

However, the Social Register does not state a fact which I predicted more than two months ago—that the "Paul Fitz Simons" have shaken the dust of exclusive Newport from off their feet and are now domiciled at the old French farm up in New Hampshire.

Newport, without the former Elsie French, will be almost like London without Westminister Abbey or Rome without the Vatican. Not that I mean to infer Mrs. Fitz Simon is a landmark. Mercy, no, only she has been looked upon as Newport's best known all-year-round resident for the past decade and for her to kick up a rumpus over her taxes and depart from the Rhode Island watering place in a huff has created no end of excitement among the hoi polloi on "Thames Street" and the local "talent" in Newport.

Some of the more unkind villagers are wondering if the one-time Mrs. Vanderbilt is "hard-up," but Elsie's friends insist it is a matter of principle and not the $900 taxes over which the trouble arose.

Like "Teenie" Oelrichs, Mrs. Fitz Simon has a large fortune which she spends liberally—but woe betide anyone who attempts to "put one over" on Mrs. Fitz Simon.

Everyone, of course, is interested to know what will become of Mrs. Fitz Simon's beautiful estate overlooking the bay. It has been one of the bulwarks of the exclusive set for a number of years and those who should know whereof they speak say it is doubtful if Paul and Elsie will occupy "Harbourview" next Summer. It will most likely be put up "For Rent."

"Harbourview" occupied by strangers. Goodness! What is Newport coming to.

I hear that the Fitz Simons (really it seems so different to spell it that way) will lead the "simple life" up in New Hampshire and that Paul will be a farmer.

I neglected to say "a gentleman farmer!"

There is a difference, you know.

A Wise Mother and a Good Dessert

"I wish I could find something for the children that they would like as well as cornstarch pudding or blanc mange," said Mrs. Matthews, as she and Mrs. Edmonds sat talking one afternoon. "They're such a nuisance to make, and one never knows whether they are going to turn out right."

"Why don't you make Puddine? That always turns out right," replied her friend.

"Puddine?" questioned Mrs. Matthews, with interest. "What is it? Another dessert that sometimes is a success, but generally isn't?"

"No, indeed," said Mrs. Edmonds emphatically. "Puddine is a perfectly wonderful dessert that always turns out right. You just add milk and sugar to it and boil for three minutes, and you have that thing, and cooled you will have a nice, rich mold of delicious cream pudding."

"It sounds wonderful," interrupted Mrs. Matthews.

"It is wonderful," replied Mrs. Edmonds. "You can get it in a number of flavors—chocolate, vanilla, orange, lemon—and you can use Puddine for a sorts of things. It makes the most delicious echo and rice fillings, and smooth, velvety ice cream."

"Is it expensive?" asked her friend.

"Oh, no, indeed. A 15c package of Puddine will serve 12 people. And then what I like about it is that I can let the children have as much as they want, because it is pure and wholesome."

"I certainly shall get some Puddine," said Mrs. Matthews. "I'm glad you told me about it."

Freeman.

Her sixteen-year-old sister, Sally, previously testified for the mother.

One of Freeman's witnesses, a detective, J. P. Colbert, described Mrs. Freeman as "an fine and sweet a woman" as he had ever met, according to Freeman himself under cross-examination.

He also said he paid Colbert nearly $10,000 to trail Mrs. Freeman.

Freeman said Colbert urged him to try to effect a reconciliation, with Colbert acting as intermediary.

Q.—Did you agree with Colbert about his acting as intermediary? A.—I did.

Q.—You gave him full authority to act as intermediary? A.—I did.

Q.—You employed Miss Christie MacDonnell as a detective? A.—I did.

Q.—How much did you pay her? A.—I paid her twenty or thirty dollars.

AT FERNCROFT INN.

Q.—You, Miss MacDonnell, E. B. Williams and Miss Norworth were together at Ferncroft Inn? A.—No.

Q.—Didn't you introduce Miss MacDonnell to Mr. Williams at Ferncroft Inn? A.—No.

Q.—You know Miss Norworth, don't you? A.—Never heard of the lady.

Q.—I mean Miss Norworth, not Miss Norworth. A.—I know her very well.

Q.—But the four of you were never at Ferncroft together A.—We never were.

Freeman testified in entries in his checkbook. He said that false entries, put down for "buying stock" represented money he said Colbert. Although he paid the detective $9,595.95, he said,

Q.—Do you remember Mr. Colbert saying to you that Mrs. Freeman was not the kind of a woman you led him to believe she was? A.—No, sir. What he did say—

Q.—That's all. You have answered. Did you write to Mr. Colbert that Mr. Morton told you that Colbert had said he had absolutely nothing against Mrs. Freeman? A.—No, not in that way.

Q.—Did Mr. Colbert repeatedly tell you it was unwise of you to be spending as much money as you had been in investigating your wife's actions? A.—I cannot answer yes or no.

Q.—Did you tell Colbert that some of the detectives he employed in Framingham were a rotten bunch? A.—No, sir. I do not believe I ever said that. There was one man I did speak to him about. It was a man who drank.

Q.—But it was from these men you received information? A.—Some of them.

Q.—And you believed them in preference to your wife? A.—(promptly) I most certainly did, on those trips she made.

CALLED REFINED WOMAN.

Q.—On August 1, when you and Mr. Colbert were at East Dennis, did Colbert say that he found Mrs. Freeman to be one of the most gentle and refined women he had ever met? A.—Yes, something like that.

Q.—Did you tell Colbert that you were willing to take blame for your errors and omissions? A.—Yes. I told everyone that.

Q.—Did Mr. Colbert outline a method of procedure for conciliation between you and Mrs. Freeman? A.—Yes.

Q.—And you wanted reconciliation with this woman you say was unfaithful? A.—Yes, I did.

Q.—You did not love her? A.—(hesitatingly) Yes, I loved her.

Q.—You did not love her dearly? A.—No, I did not love her dearly at that time. But I loved her.

Q.—So you loved this woman you accused of unfaithfulness? A.—Yes, but I loved the children more.

A letter was then read from Mr. Colbert to Mr. Freeman by Attorney Hall. It read in part: "Of course, you must realize that you have lost your equilibrium when you say that Mrs. Freeman is meeting Dr. Benner, and you must have said a lot of things to her in the presence of the children which angered her to such an extent that she asserted herself in the matter."

Q.—Did you reply to that letter? A.—I did.

Q.—Was your letter written with the idea of trying to effect a reconciliation? A.—It was not.

WENT TO GET DAUGHTER.

Freeman, when asked if on August 1 at East Dedham, he called Mrs. Freeman and Mrs. Morton, her sister, vile names, replied that he could not answer correctly. This was the occasion on which he went down to the Cape with the intention of taking Sally to the mountains with him, and said that he had the advice of counsel to take her by force if necessary.

Another letter from Mr. Colbert to Freeman was read by counsel. It said in part, "However, I do not believe that the attitude that you have taken when you called Mrs. Freeman and Mrs. Morton the names you have is a proper one in order to obtain results for the happiness of the children and yourself. In consequence of this I interrupted you two or three times."

Freeman testified that he wrote Colbert and corrected his (Colbert's) viewpoint. In his reply Freeman admitted he emphasized to Colbert that Mrs. Morton and his wife were sneaking around and doing sneaking and underhand things, and that they had spirited Ruth away to East Dennis when they knew he was about to take her up to the mountains on his vacation.

Q.—Didn't you ever see this diary? A.—I never did.

ASKED SALLY TO HELP.

Q.—Didn't you ask Sally to take down the figures on the speedometer to find out where her mother had been and when she returned home? A.—Yes.

Q.—Didn't you tell Sally and Ruth about the trouble between you and Mrs. Freeman concerning the doctor? A.—Yes.

In his direct testimony Freeman had said that before the advent of Dr. Benner he had never warned his wife against going to any doctor without his knowledge, or telephoning anyone without his knowledge. Attorney Hall produced several telegrams to Mrs. Freeman, signed by Freeman, in 1906, 1907 and 1909, asking her who had called the doctor, who had telephoned him. All these telegrams Freeman was unable to identify. Hall then introduced a letter already in evidence in which Freeman said: "Who telephoned the doctor? I hope you did not, because I told you many times not to." Freeman admitted writing this.

Q.—You say that you paid $11,000 for the land for the house where you lived. A.—I did.

Q.—Did not Mr. Reed, Mrs. Freeman's father, repay you this? A.—Not all of it.

Q.—Did you ever render a bill to him? A.—Yes.

Q.—You say you love your children? How much have you contributed to their support since September, 1919? A.—Nothing.

Q.—How much have you paid for their schooling? A.—Nothing.

Q.—How much for their clothes? A.—Nothing.

Q.—Did you write this to Mr. Reed, "I am very glad of your annual visit, and wish you would make them more often"? A.—Yes.

Q.—Were you sincere in this expression toward your father-in-law? A.—Yes.

Q.—Especially sincere since he was paying for the house you were living in? A.—No more so than previously.

DURING BUSINESS HOURS.

Freeman testified to seeing Mrs. Freeman enter or leave Dr. Benner's office, or the building in which he had his office, in Park square, five or six times. He said that it was always during business hours, and that he did not know, nor ever tried to find out, whether there were other patients she had to wait for.

Q.—Did you ever see her hair disarranged? A.—Once, when she was coming out of the office in December.

Q.—You noticed that her hair was disarranged, but didn't notice that her coat collar was turned up? A.—Yes.

Q.—You have charged her with unfaithfulness on these visits? A.—Not entirely.

Q.—Did you see the curtains pulled down when she entered Dr. Benner's office? A.—I did not.

In his direct testimony Freeman had told of one occasion when Benner came down in his pajamas and bathrobe to meet Mrs. Freeman.

Q.—Did you know that at this time Dr. Benner had been ill in bed for six weeks? A.—It was so reported to me.

Q.—Did you know that later he had his leg amputated? A.—Yes, I knew it.

Freeman positively denied that Mrs. Freeman was being shadowed by detectives while he and she were staying at the Manhattan Hotel in New York, and at that time he had done nothing to obtain evidence against Mrs. Freeman. He said that that was the only reason why he did not take the blotting paper with which Mrs. Freeman had dried a letter, and by which, by placing in front of a mirror, he was able to read the name and address of Dr. Benner.

Freeman, it was brought out, was in the habit of tearing out portions of the reports of his wife's movements submitted to him by the detectives. He admitted that three of those reports dated June 28, June 30, and July 6, 1917, were all prior to their visit to the Manhattan Hotel and which was about August 1.

Q.—Did you send detectives to Atlantic City to follow Mrs. Freeman? A.—I did not.

Freeman said that the first time he saw the three exhibits which included the little pink card, the torn envelope and the torn letter, was when he saw them in the office of his attorney's. He said he thought they had been handed to Mr. Hall by detective Colbert. In the course of this cross examination, Mr. Hall handed to Freeman the torn letter, which Mrs. Freeman is alleged to have written, and asked the husband, "Mr. Freeman, is that your handwriting?" A.—No, sir.

Q.—Now refer to your diaries and tell me how many times you saw Mrs. Freeman going into or coming out of Dr. Benner's office on Park Square? A.—I could not do it. It would take a whole day.

Q.—But it is very important that you do so. Please refer to your diaries and tell us how often you saw Mrs. Freeman coming from or going into Dr. Benner's offices in Paris Square? A.—I shall have to go through everything to tell you that.

Mr. Freeman then began to finger his seven little black-covered, gilt-edged diaries.

Question Freeman About His 'Spy'

Q.—Do you remember Mr. Colbert saying to you that Mrs. Freeman was not the kind of woman you led him to believe she was? A.—No, sir. What he did say—

Q.—That's all. You have answered. Did you write to Mr. Colbert that Mr. Morton told you that Colbert had said he had absolutely nothing against Mrs. Freeman? A.—No, not in that way.

Q.—Did Mr. Colbert repeatedly tell you it was unwise of you to be spending as much money as you had been in investigating your wife's actions? A.—I can not answer yes or no.—From Freeman's testimony under cross-examination.

PINT IN 10 DAYS IS DRINK LIMIT

Instructions Are Issued Regarding Use of Liquor for Medicinal Purposes

Instructions regarding liquor for medicinal use and a statement that profiteering will be investigated have been received in Boston from the Internal Revenue Bureau.

According to the instructions a patient may, without a license, secure liquor if:

1—He obtains a prescription from a licensed physician who has a permit to prescribe liquor.

2—He purchases the liquor from a licensed druggist who has a permit to sell liquor.

One pint per person for ten days is the amount limited by law, except in the case of wines for medicinal use, where a doctor may prescribe "no greater quantity than is necessary for medicinal use."

Prescriptions cannot be refilled. Pending the distribution of official prescription blanks, physicians may prescribe on their own blanks.

Provision has been made for hospitals and industrial plants maintaining first-aid stations to secure intoxicating liquors for medicinal purposes.

Doctor Sees Health in Scanty Attire

Paris, Jan. 30.—Women wearing the shortest possible dresses and the lowest possible corsages are less liable to pneumonia than those who bundle up, according to the Matin today, quoting "an eminent physician."

Don't Spoil Your Hair By Washing It

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.—Advertisement.

Husband So Good He "Was Impossible"

White Plains, N. Y., Jan. 30.—It is possible for a husband to be too good, so good as to drive his wife to seek a separation, alleging cruel and inhuman treatment, according to testimony adduced in the Supreme Court here in the action of Mrs. Angelique Reese of Yonkers, against her husband, Richmond H. Reese, a Manhattan lawyer. Mrs. Reese, in her complaint, charged cruel and inhuman treatment, but when pretty Helen Grant, motion picture actress, took the witness chair for the defence, she testified that Mrs. Reese said to her:

"He was so good that he was impossible."

THEFT CHARGES AMUSE GRAHAM

Former Governor Takes Witness Stand; Laughs as He Denies Theft of Funds

Montpelier, Vt., Jan. 30.—Laughingly denying that he had stolen or embezzled State funds while occupying the office of State auditor, former Governor Horace F. Graham, taking the stand in his own defence, testified that he never feared United States Senator Carroll S. Page would force him into bankruptcy.

Graham testified that when he first learned that his conduct as State auditor was being probed his assets were the farm on which he lived and a piece of timber land.

He maintained that he never had attempted to conceal his transactions by withholding entries from State books. He acknowledged drawing orders on the State treasurer for money which he deposited to his own account in banks, explaining his action by claiming that he drew the funds to accommodate persons to whom money was owed, thus eliminating the delay entailed in waiting for a check from the State House.

38,000,000 Babies Born Each Year

Paris, Jan. 30.—An average of 38,000,000 babies are born in the world each year, which amounts to 70 births per minute, more than one per second, and if the cradles containing one year's crop of babies were placed end to end they would just reach around the earth's equator.

These are the facts and figures just arrived at by the French official birth statisticians, after ten years labor in accumulating birth statistics in every country in the world.

RUCKMAN TO DIRECT Y. M. C. A. SCHOLARSHIPS

Brigadier-General John W. Ruckman heads the committee to determine the awards of free scholarships to former service men, announced by the educational committee of the board of directors of the Boston Y. M. C. A. The association will spend approximately $20,000 in metropolitan Boston this year for these scholarships.

STRIKES NEEDED, SAYS GOMPERS

Declares Country Without Labor Disputes Is Backward and Servile

New York, Jan. 30.—"The citizens of this country will resent any movement which attempts to put shackles upon their liberties," asserted Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, speaking at the annual meeting of the National Civic Federation in the Hotel Astor.

Mr. Gompers was speaking on the subject of the Cummins bill which penalizes strikers against railroads by fine or imprisonment. Any legislation to prevent strikes, Mr. Gompers said, would be opposed by labor.

"No organization has done more to avert strikes than the American Federation of Labor," he said. "Strikes are deplorable, yet they are the most civilized form of protest against injustice. Look at any country free of strikes and you will find there the lowest form of life—servility; the most backward, least developed people, lack of civic pride and an impotency either for that country's own cohesion or its national defence. In the absence of strikes bespeaks prosperity, independence, progress and wealth, then China ought to be the leader of civilization."

Legion Applicants Not to Be Asked Rank

Franklin D'Olier, national commander of the American Legion, has issued the following instructions to State department officials, who in turn will transmit the instructions to the posts of the country:

"No request should be made of any applicant for membership in the legion concerning his previous rank while in service, either personally or by information asked for on any forms used by post or department headquarters. Any forms now in use which contain questions bearing on this subject should be discontinued."

CHIEFS FAVOR, FIREMEN FIGHT 'CALL' AMENDMENT

A proposed amendment to the two-platoon firemen's bill, under which chiefs might require firemen to go on or continue on duty in any grave emergency was the object of controversy before the committee on cities.

Chief Jesse F. Harrett of the Peabody fire department, who petitioned for the amendment, was supported by several fire chiefs.

Thomas E. F. Wilson, attorney, representing other firemen, opposed the change on the ground that it would give too much power to certain fire chiefs.

Scottie suits—a ten strike!

SCOTTIE suits have taken the town by storm. Boston women have been quick to see their possibilities.

Their beauty and simplicity of line, their fashion, their adaptability to all needs from an every-day suit, to a dress-up suit and to a sport suit; and above all the fact that they represent "double the wear at half the cost" have made them an immediate success.

Scottie suits were well thought out; there was no accident in their coming to Filene's. They were planned and bought weeks ago when jersey was one of the few fabrics that could be bought at low prices.

Since then jersey, too, has joined the ranks of the things going up, up, up. But we have planned in a big way, and the prices at which we are selling Scotties benefits thereby.

And every day the Big Separate Shop for Scottie suits alone on the fourth floor and the women's shop on the fifth floor are piling up totals that make us look twice at the calendar to make sure it is not April instead of January!

For the word has gone the rounds that Scottie suits are something out of the ordinary. And with the knowledge already spread of what Filene better-values mean, out of the ordinary takes on an added meaning!

Filene jersey suits $25 $30 $35

Jazz Tiresome to London Dancers

London, Jan. 30.—The jazz; it wavers, totters, and many say it's already doomed in London.

"Take it from me, this dancing craze is going to last five years," says a restaurant proprietor.

"Take it from me, it begins to show signs of petering out," says the jazz band proprietor.

Though the evidence regarding the dance craze isn't conclusive, the available data shows a slight downward trend, to be scientific about it. Occasionally, not always, but just now and then, appeals come in for banjo men for dances.

$100 AWAITING HOMELY GIRL

Also Free Trip to New York, a New Spring Gown and Several Hats

Homely girls, attention!

Is there one in Boston desirous of making an easy $100 as well as receiving a free trip to New York and an additional free outfit of a new spring gown and an assorted lot of new spring hats?

Failing in his effort to find such a one in New York, Harry S. Bernhard, president of the Retail Milliners' Association of America, No. 1270 Broadway, has appealed to the Boston American to find him such a girl in Boston.

The requisitions are that she must be genuinely homely, under thirty years of age, and not over five feet, seven inches in height, and weight about 125 pounds.

She is to act as a model at the fashion show to be held at the Hotel Astor, New York, Wednesday night, February 4.

Mr. Bernhard promises that she will be made beautiful through the millinery art and for her services she will be given $100 in cash and all her expenses paid.

Early applicants have the best chance of selection.

Here is your chance, homely girls, to become beautiful. Don't crowd.

DON'T SUFFER WITH NEURALGIA

When those sharp pains go shooting through your head, when your skull seems as if it would split, just rub a little Musterole on your temples and neck. It draws out the inflammation, soothes away the pain, usually giving quick relief.

Musterole is a clean, white ointment, made with oil of mustard. Better than a mustard plaster and does not blister.

Many doctors and nurses frankly recommend Musterole for sore throat, bronchitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of the back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet—colds of the chest (it often prevents pneumonia). It is always dependable.

IRISH FRIENDS PLAN COUNCILS

Meet in South End Tonight to Elect Officers and Outline Loan Drive

Details of the progress being made in Massachusetts for the Irish loan drive will be outlined tonight at a mass meeting of delegates from the different branches of the Friends of Irish Freedom in Catholic Union Hall, Washington and Worcester streets, South End.

John F. Harrigan, state president of the organization, will call the delegates to order at 8 o'clock.

DISCUSS LOAN DRIVE.

The primary purpose of the meeting is to form a Municipal Council, composed of representatives from each branch in Suffolk County, and map out a plan of action for its future guidance.

This will be the forerunner of the formation of similar municipal councils throughout the State.

State President Harrigan, whose home is in Worcester, is chairman of the Irish loan drive. He will submit a report dealing with the progress of the work of the entire organization.

A feature of the meeting will be the election of officers for the ensuing year, adoption of a set of by-laws and a permanent meeting hall. This action is in accordance with the constitutional requirements of the present organization.

During the evening addresses will be made by high officers of Friends of Irish Freedom, as well as associate members, and it is probable that other matters dealing with the proposed drive for the $10,000,000 fund for the success of the Irish republic will be considered.

PROTEST AGAINST LEAGUE.

Protesting against any modification of the reservations of the League of Nations covenant adopted by the United States Senate, the members of Roger Casement branch of the Friends of Irish Freedom, adopted a resolution appealing to Congress "to immediately submit this question, in accordance with the suggestion of President Wilson, and also the Peace Treaty, to the people."

The branch voted to attend the public meeting of the military unit of the Friends of Irish Freedom, the Paul Revere branch, in Faneuil Hall Sunday afternoon.

Large delegations of members of the Friends of Irish Freedom and other Irish organizations will attend the big demonstration against the League of Nations to be held in Tremont Temple Wednesday evening, February 4, at which United States Senators Reed and Walsh will tell why they opposed the covenant.

President De Valera of the Irish Republic calls attention to the fact that the drive for Irish bond certificates will start in Boston and surrounding cities and towns on February 21. He is anxious that the members of the various Irish organizations arouse interest in the drive.

A. O. H. IN BOND DRIVE.

Of interest to members of the Irish county clubs in and about Boston is the public installation of the officers-elect of the County Monaghan Association to be held in Paine Memorial Hall, No. 9 Appleton street, this evening. The affair will be enlivened by patriotic speeches by men prominent in the affairs of the nation, State and city. Patrick J. Cassidy, president-elect, will preside. He is an overseas veteran.

The drive of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Ancient Order of Hibernians for new members is meeting with great success. Public meetings in various sections of the city to still further the work is being planned by an energetic committee. A list of speakers will be announced later.

At the coming quarterly convention of the Suffolk County Branch of the Ancient Order of Hibernians the delegates will be instructed as to the part their respective divisions are expected to take in disposing of Irish bond certificates.

JAURES' SLAYER COMMENDED

Assemblyman at N. Y. Socialist Hearing Denounces Dead Man as French Traitor

By International News Service.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 30.—Assemblyman Cuvillier at today's investigation of the five unseated Socialist Assemblymen, asked whether the Attorney-General was taking steps to revoke the charter of the Rand School.

Algernon Lee, director of the school, said the question had been taken up and dropped.

Cuvillier then asked whether Frank Tannenbaum, sentenced to the workhouse in New York for alleged rioting in a church, was a professor of the Rand School.

"Yes," said Lee. "And now Tannenbaum is assistant to the chair of history in Columbia University."

The assassination of Jaures, the French Socialist, was the basis of a lively discussion.

"Jaures opposed the war didn't he?" Assemblyman Cuvillier asked Lee.

"Yes," said Lee.

"And he was shot for it by a man who has gone scot free wasn't he?"

"Yes, and Jaures was not the only Socialist murdered in the war," said Lee.

"Jaures should have been assassinated," declared Cuvillier, "and the man who shot him has rightly gone free. He told French soldiers not to fight the Germans when they invaded France, August 1."

"Jaures was dead seven days before August 7," said Lee.

"Wasn't there a man named Bernard Shaw who said that British soldiers ought to shoot their officers and go home?"

"Yes, George Bernard Shaw said that," said Lee.

"And he wasn't shot for saying it because he lived in England," said Seymour Stedman of the Socialists' counsel.

LIVING COST TO REGULATE PAY

Advance is Granted to Book and Job Printers in New York

New York, Jan. 30.—Union compositors in the book and job offices of New York will receive $45 a week on a 48-hour basis, according to an agreement reached by the employers and "Big Six" Typographical Union. The scale is an increase of $9 over that which expired September 30 and $3 above the one announced by the master printers at that time.

The 48-hour week is to be reduced to 44 hours May 1, 1921, the agreement provided. The salary schedule is retroactive to January 1. Provision is made for a readjustment of wages, but not of other working conditions, on October 1 and every six months thereafter if warranted by living costs. The new contract covers a period of three years.

Overtime is to be paid at the rate of time and a half, work on Sundays or holidays at double time and triple time for night work on holidays. It was stipulated that a joint committee supervise the apprentice rules.

ATTACK PICKARD IN DEAN CASE

Selectmen Declare Sudden Calling of Grand Jury Hearing Hampered Them

West Jaffrey, N. H., Jan. 30.—Correspondence which passed between the selectmen of this town and County Solicitor Roy M. Pickard of Keene shows that when Pickard finally decided to call a Grand Jury to inquire into the murder of Dr. William Kendrick Dean, after eight months of prodding and delay, he did it so suddenly that the town and Federal officials complained that they scarcely had sufficient time to collect their evidence.

The selectmen claimed they were so handicapped by the suddenness of Pickard's decision that they asked that the Grand Jury investigation be deferred a week or two. This request was not granted. The following letter bears on this phase of the case:

"East Jaffrey, N. H.,
"April 7, 1919.

"Dear Mr. Pickard:

"Replying to your favor of April 3, of course we shall have Mr. Kent (DeKeiter) hold himself in readiness to testify before the grand jury, and we are writing him to that effect. You do not need to summon him. He will come whenever he is called.

"We find the time in which we have to act rather short, because you did not notify us that the matter would go before the next grand jury until March 20, so that we had just about a week in which to try to do a good many things in order to help you.

"We think it is very important for you to have Mrs. Morison as a witness. We understand that Mrs. Morison is at present in Washington, but we are quite sure that she would gladly come and testify without a summons if she had a little notice so she could arrange her affairs. The same is true of Miss Ware, if her testimony should become important.

"Might it not be a good plan for you to suggest to the grand jury that it adjourn for a week or two so that we would all have a little more time? We wish to make sure that every possible piece of evidence which has come to our attention be turned over to you, but it is not easy to do so much in a few days.

"We should also like sufficient time to check up matters with the Federal authorities and make sure that they were not relying on us to present to you evidence which we might be relying on them to furnish. We know that you are sincere in wanting to present the case with no evidence left out, and we therefore respectfully suggest that an adjournment of a week or two would give us time to make sure that everything possible has been done.

"When this is all over, no matter how it comes out, we wish everybody to feel that all of us who were compelled to play a part in the proceedings, acted fairly and did their level best.

"If through the shortness of the time important witnesses could not be reached or produced and the grand jury did not hear them, we are sure that there would always be left a good deal of dissatisfaction. We therefore respectfully urge that such an adjournment would be helpful and wise. Very truly yours,

"EDWARD C. BOYNTON,
"Chairman.

IDENTIFY WIFE OF YALE MAN

Woman Found Wandering at Hartford Is Helpmeet of Professor Bailey

Hartford, Ct., Jan. 30.—The woman who was found wandering in this city last Friday was identified as Mrs. William B. Bailey, wife of a Yale professor, and a former Worcester, Mass., woman.

Identification was made by Attorney Albert H. Barclay of New Haven, who is preparing a suit for separation from her husband. For two years Mrs. Bailey has been attempting to support herself and child in department store work, it was stated.

Professor Bailey is connected with Yale divinity school, and is an instructor in political economy. He was president of the New Haven Organized Charities, president of the Connecticut Association, chairman of the Social Evil Commission of Connecticut, director of the Consumers' League, National Municipal League, Civic Club and Union League.

'Curse of Castlewood' Takes Hanan Heir

Newport, R. I., Jan. 30.—The "Curse of Castlewood" claimed another victim when Charles Talbot Smith, stepson of John Henry Hanan, owner of the million-dollar mansion at Coddington Point, died Wednesday of pneumonia.

The "curse" that seems to follow ownership of the mansion appeared shortly after it was built by Louis Bruguiere, a favorite in the Summer colony. His name was often linked with that of a popular young society woman. Then his brother Emile wrote the play "Baroness Fiddlesticks," poking fun at the Newport society set, and Louis' social career came to an end.

The Castlewood was mortgaged and when Louis and his mother were returning from France on the steamship Arabic, the vessel was torpedoed and Mrs. Bruguiere was drowned. Arnold Essex, the next owner of Castlewood, occupied it but one season when he died. It then passed into the hands of John Henry Hanan, whose wife died shortly afterwards.

SPRINGFIELD TO FLY ERIN FLAG

Police Chief Refuses to Prevent Use of Banner at De Valera Welcome

Springfield, Jan. 30.—The flag of the Irish Republic will be carried in the parade to welcome Eamon De Valera, its president.

Chief of Police William J. Quilty refused today to interfere with the plans, despite the opposition of Colonel Charles L. Young. He will allow the flag to fly from stores and homes. His only provision is that the American flag be also displayed.

Colonel Young protests, he says, on the request of prominent citizens. Chief Quilty says that the Irish Republic is not yet a nation, therefore its flag has no more standing than the flag of a fraternal organization.

De Valera will visit Springfield February 7. As yet the City Council has taken no steps to officially welcome him. This has angered the committee of the United Irish Societies in charge of the reception.

BAR DOG'S BODY FROM TOMB

Dr. Mary C. Lowell Gives Her Deceased Pet to Boston Friends

Friends of Dr. Mary C. Lowell in Boston have been given the body of Yoshi, her Pekinese dog, which was removed from a tomb in the cemetery at Dover Village, Me., by the authorities.

The body had been in the tomb a week. It was taken by order of the selectmen, as a result of hysterical protests by townsfolk.

Dr. Lowell is said to be the only woman in the world that holds degrees in medicine, law and jurisprudence. She was awarded degrees by Mt. Holyoke College, College of Physicians and Surgeons, Boston, and Boston University.

The removal of the dog's body ends a turmoil in the twin towns of Dover and Foxcroft, where Dr. Lowell formerly resided and where she maintains a Summer home. She took the animal's remains in a child's casket, accompanied by a nurse, from Boston a week ago. At Dover a box was obtained from a local undertaker and all that was earthly of Yoshi was deposited in the cemetery tomb to await the coming of Spring, when it was to be buried in the Lowell family lot in Foxcroft Cemetery.

Modern Ways or Primitive Practice?

You wouldn't like the task of weaving the wool for your family's clothes. You wouldn't be content to spin flax and weave linen. It would take a lot of time and your products would be old-fashioned. People have outgrown the practices of primitive times.

But millions still think that the old-fashioned way of making butter is the only way and that only certain kinds of fats should be used. Science has found a new way. It uses the fats of cocoanuts and peanuts combined with fresh pasteurized milk churned into the most appetizing spread your palate has ever welcomed.

Want to Cut Bullion in Silver Dollar

Washington, Jan. 30.—Members of Congress who profess to see danger to the gold monetary standard system of the United States, because of the continued high price of silver, are expected to make a vigorous effort to get from the House Banking and Currency Committee a favorable report on the McFadden bill reducing the amount of silver in a dollar.

This bill would establish as standard for silver dollars 80 per cent. fine of metal, while the gold dollar shall contain 90 per cent. fine of gold. Silver coin would be melted and the bullion sold at market prices.

RAILS WILL BE COMMANDEERED

Hines Decides to Employ War Powers to Restore Roads in Good Condition

By International News Service.

Washington, Jan. 30.—Director-General Walker D. Hines of the Railroad Administration has decided to employ the President's war powers to commandeer all possible steel rail production to supply the roads instead of bidding in the open market.

This became known today as the details of Mr. Hines' new policy on big orders at the various mills were announced.

Tonnage of steel rails to be commandeered by the War Department at Director-General Hines' request will be as follows:

Midvale Steel & Ordnance Company, 36,000 tons; Bethlehem Steel Company, 10,500 tons, Carnegie Steel Company, 12,000 tons; Illinois Steel Company, 12,000 tons, and Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Company 12,000 tons.

Steel manufacturers have met Mr. Hines' latest move with surprise and from some quarters protest was registered. Some of them believed it is aimed particularly at those manufacturers who are asking $57 a ton for open hearth rails. This figure is an advance of $10 a ton over the stabilization price agreed upon between the industrial board and steel manufacturers a year ago.

The reason for Mr. Hines' new policy was clear when it was shown the railroad administration was sorely in need of 250,000 steel rails, and this amount it would like to have before the roads go back to private control March 1.

With orders previously placed by Mr. Hines for 42,500 tons and the 72,500 tons which will be forthcoming under the commandeering order of Secretary Baker, the railroad administration still owes the roads 145,000 tons as a replacement item. Mr. Hines indicated he would rather give rails than cash before the date for the roads to go back.

He refused the liberal reward Mrs. Glynn insisted that he take.

VOTERS FORGET PARTY TIES

Independents to Pick Next President, Says Investigator After Tour

By International News Service.

Washington, Jan. 30.—The November election will depend entirely upon the independent vote, Lingley Sanpling professional Republicans and Democrats say to the contrary, the "independents" now hold the balance of power and will elect the next President.

This statement was the outstanding feature of the report brought here today by a nationally prominent Democrat from New York, following a tour of investigation through several of the doubtful States, into three of the four great sections of the country and threw him into contact with all conditions of people.

The findings of this expert are deemed important because they are based upon a wide experience in national politics and because they are the report of conditions as he found them, not necessarily as he would like them to be. He said:

"I found the people standing up on their hind legs and pawing. They know what they want. Furthermore, they know how to get it and they are going to have it.

"Never in my life have I seen a big percentage of Democrats and Republicans openly proclaiming their intention of voting for some man with a program and not for the mere nominee of some party.

"I do not think this necessarily means an independent or third party candidate, though such a candidate, and a winning one at that, is not the impossibility the regulars would have you believe."

The Hats This Spring Are Decidedly New

7.50—10.00

THEY are different and charming, not alone in the matter of straw—which we must admit is quite unlike anything we've ever seen—some so shiny, lustrous and sinuous and then some so rough and unseen. Smart little feathers, effective touches of embroidery, gay flowers, all add new touches, because of the new ways in which they are used.

The materials are soft georgettes, taffetas, ribbons, bat'wing, hair cloth—

The shapes are small—turbans and off the face shapes with occasional broad brimmed picture hat.

The colors are black, brown, navy.

SIMS OBEYED THE ORDERS OF AN ANTI-IRISH BIGOT, SAYS CONNOLLY

ADMIRAL AIDED PLOT

Writer Says Officer Used Position to Spread British Propaganda

tary barracks. Acting Mayor of the Town and sometimes Minister of the Gospel. You could not enter or leave the port by land or sea, you could not send a cable or a letter through the mail if he said no. Proclamations with his rank and the sir initials flowing out like a tail of a kite were tasted up all over the walls of the place. He could marry people or divorce 'em or shoot 'em or give them ten years in jail—anything.

Admiral Bayly was known to be an anti-Irish bigot when they sent him to Queenstown. Another bigot as well as military failure was later sent to Dublin Castle. Why? To be useful, for what else? Bayly was certainly useful to the English government at Queenstown. Imagine trying to get anything through when every cable had first to be passed on by one of his staff, and every letter was opened by the censors in London. Try to slip anything out on your own—! Well, there was a fine of a hundred pounds and a jail sentence for every letter they caught going in or out of Ireland, except it went by way of the Royal mails.

BANNED IRISH NEWS.

All that meant that nobody was going to get anything across to America about conditions in Ireland if they could help it. Free speech and free press, and the United States already showing too much friendliness for Ireland—no, no.

Our destroyers came over and the trouble began. Our bluejackets from the first jump did not act to suit Bayly. They showed alarming indications of not warming up to their British brothers-in-arms. Our gobs were on the job every minute of their hard nights and days at sea, but in port it was different altogether too many were saying openly that they were out to lick the Germans, but if ever another war came they hoped it would be with the "limies." The "Navy Navy" would be pretty safe, they said.

If an American officer spoke his mind too freely he knew he would be jacked up by Sims from London, but the enlisted men never worried much about London. They were encouraged to mix with the Britishers, but about the only time they ever mixed was in a battle royal; and then, no matter who started it—as our gobs put it—"we finished it." In Queenstown, as our gobs began to come in increasing numbers, fights became less frequent, but in English ports, where our fellows were always much in the minority, there was a lot doing. Sims ought to put a chapter in his book about some of these fights. From what our fellows told me, I could write a whole volume myself.

SYMPATHIZED WITH IRISH.

Our fellows were pretty open in their sympathy for most everything Irish. They waved Sinn Fein flags at Sinn Fein meetings not only because they were with the Sinn Fein cause, also to show that they had no use for the "limie."

A good percentage of these were of Irish blood of course, but that held too, for many who were not of Irish blood as they came to know more of real conditions over there. And they know what Bayly was, too.

It was fine to go seven or eight hundred miles to see to pick up a convoy and then when you got in sight of land have to turn it over to a British escort. Sims probably padded his British percentages with British deeds of that kind. They were brought in by British ships—surely.

Scores of our fellows married Irish girls in Queenstown and Cork, and every Irish girl in Queenstown and Cork was a Sinn Feiner; and they were constantly visiting old country relations of their home folks in Ireland. They were raising the devil generally with Bayly's notions of what was proper and befitting. The wounded soldiers of the Royal Irish Guards, a solidly Sinn Fein body, could be found any night in our bluejackets' Men's Club at Queenstown; you could visit for weeks without seeing a British bluejacket there.

SPREAD FALSE REPORT.

Now Bayly wasn't going to stand that forever; he had to do something. The city of Cork was a short half-hour's ride from Queenstown. It was a great place of visiting for our gobs on leave; it was also a great Sinn Fein city. One Sunday afternoon, a bunch of young Corkonians moved down the street and cleaned out a few British institutions, among others the recruiting headquarters. It was not a real fight, not half as warm as a hurling match between two county teams; but a few people got black eyes and bloody noses out of it, three or four of our gobs among them. The story is that a bunch of our gobs helped out the Sinn Feiners. I know one of ours who got a split lip in it, and he was indignant with the husky young guy who gave it to him: "I was with your crowd, what didjer slam me for?" our gob demanded. The young Irishman answered: "Excuse me, but for a second I had me doubts, and it was no time to have a doubt."

That row in Cork was too good a chance; so out goes the story from Bayly's headquarters—Sinn Feiners assault American bluejackets. It was sent on to London and O. K.'d by Sims, and cabled over here. And much indignation resulted. What! The Irish against the United States! An amenable American correspondent took Bayly's account of it and sent it on in an article which was published in a magazine of large circulation and strong English tendencies here.

That was the beginning. They had to follow their hand. The next move was to prohibit our enlisted men from going to Cork on leave, the reason given to the press being that there was too much bad blood between the natives of Cork and our gobs; which incidentally did not keep many of our fellows from getting into civilian clothes in Queenstown and going up anyway. But the proceeding started something else.

THREW MUD AT GIRLS.

There happened to be at Cork recruited from everywhere, from English ports some of them, a corps of young women. Their business? Well, call it the Department of Public Affections which was the phrase of an army chaplain friend of mine used in speaking of them. These young creatures said: "If our friends can't come to see us, there are trains running to Queenstown, we'll go to see them," and they did. One train which left Cork for Queenstown every evening carried a crowd of them go regularly to Queenstown that it came to be known as the Soiled Dove Special.

Now Queenstown is a pretty more little place and the Catholic clergy there take an active interest in the morals of their people (for one thing no American sailor was allowed to marry a Queenstown girl until he brought along a ticket of health from the surgeon of his ship). The nightly presence of the young women visitors became a scandal in Queenstown, so much so that a Catholic curate at the Cathedral preached a scorching sermon from the altar about it. He said some measures should be taken to protect the young girls of the parish from contact with these creatures.

It was no doubt as a result of that priest's protest that one evening as the usual party came out of the station from the special they were met by a crowd of young boys; they were not young men, they were young boys of twelve or thirteen years of age, and it being the rainy season in Queenstown there were rivers of mud in the street. These young boys pelted the visiting young women with lumps of mud and drove them back to the station, and from the station the young women took the next train back and troubled Queenstown no more.

That is the history of that riot, as I got it from residents of Queenstown and an American naval officer, who was on that same train and came out of the station with the crowd of young women. But what did the propaganda make of it? The press dispatches went from Queenstown to London and from London to here that a crowd of young women visiting sailors of our fleet had been set upon and beaten by a gang of young Irishmen; all with the intent of showing, of course, that native young Irishmen had no use for our Yankees, and if they had no use for our bluejackets it could be true that they had no use for our country either.

SIMS ANTI-IRISH.

An American correspondent whom I know very well, a man of national reputation, also one who was on most friendly terms with the British Admiralty, retold that story as the press dispatches had it, in a weekly of tremendous circulation, adding to it that there no doubt, was one way in which the Irish had earned their fame as fighting men—beating up [illegible]. He knew better, but his [illegible] one of the most pro-English [illegible] United States.

[illegible] the illustrations of [illegible] manufacture and spread [illegible] again in Ireland, because [illegible] I can give first-hand [illegible] if what did actually happ[illegible] Admiral Sims used [illegible] the British government [illegible] spread them. This is their [illegible] if they can from [illegible] who do not advance the [illegible] methods of the British gov[illegible]

THE END.

Connolly Explains "Sinn Fein" Rows at Cork

Sims' Backers Ready to Abandon Fight

Washington, Jan. 30.—Congressional supporters of Rear-Admiral Sims in his controversy with Secretary of the Navy Daniels over the conduct of naval operations during the war and the distribution of medals after the war are now reported to be seeking a graceful means of escape from the dilemma with which they are confronted.

To maintain their present attitude it would be necessary to introduce resolutions supporting Sims, the one are of which would be another resolution calling for the impeachment of Secretary Daniels. It is declared, however, navy officials say, that such a resolution could not muster a corporal's guard of supporters, therefore, the attack will not be pressed along that line.

The naval inquiry also is likely to be dropped after Secretary Daniels tells his story before the committee and investigation the Senate of the navy's conduct of the war is said to be doomed to a similar fate.

If we were speculators instead of retailers, and had plenty of money to tie up for nine or ten months, we'd like nothing better than to carry these coats over to next fall. They would show us a handsome profit by that time.

But we need the money that's tied up in these coats to finance our purchases for Spring. We buy as well as sell for cash, you know. So if you need a good overcoat now, or expect to need one next winter, now's the time and here's the place to get it at a lot less than we would have to pay the manufacturers for it today.

BIG WRESTLERS IN TITLE BOUT

Both Stecher and Caddock in Prime Condition and Confident of Victory

New York, Jan. 30.—Karl Caddock and Joe Stecher will match brawn and skill in a scientific struggle for the world's heavyweight catch-as-catch-can wrestling title here tonight.

The contest should be a record-breaker in several ways. It will be the first title match in this country to be decided by one fall and indications are that new figures for attendance and receipts at an indoor match will be established. Promoter Jack Curley expects a full house.

George Bothner, veteran wrestler and trainer, will be the referee. While odds are not to be had on the match, it is generally conceded that Caddock is a favorite in betting. Broadway odds are 6 to 5 that Caddock and Stecher claim to be in prime condition and confidence is pretty evenly divided between the rivals.

NEWTON BEATS MELROSE IN HOCKEY GAME, 7-1

Newton High defeated Melrose in a rough hockey game by a score of 7 to 1. As a result of several mixups on the ice between the players of the rival teams, Referee Martin stopped the game after only fifteen minutes of play in the second period. The management of the Melrose team intends to enter a protest and ask that the game be played over at Newton, with outside officials or on a neutral rink.

A Cap reduces the High Cost of Overhead

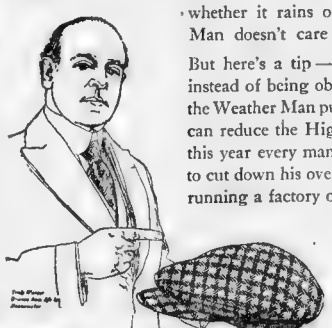
THIS year Young America will be crowned with a cap. I don't know where this sensible style started—but it's here. The best part of it is that by wearing a cap you can save money and be stylish at the same time. It usually costs money to keep up with the Joneses.

I anticipated an unprecedented style demand for caps this Winter—that's why I plunged in woolens this Spring. I cleaned out the mills. Now, I've got the goods for about half the price that the same cap will cost you anywhere else. If I had to go into the market today, I'd have to charge you as much as the other fellow.

I've got English Tweeds, Homespuns, Cheviots, Invisible Plaids, Over-Plaids, and Shepherd Plaids, Mixtures and Plain Effects, every piece all-wool and all made up in one-piece tops in English and domestic styles, full and medium shapes, with and without inner bands. This represents the most wonderful assortment of unusual values in caps in all kinds of patterns, styles, shapes, colors and fabrics that have ever been collected in any hat store in this country.

Every man needs a cap for the occasion, just as much as a soft hat or a derby. Of course, every man doesn't play golf, or ride on the rear seat of an open jitney in the Winter. But all of us go to work, whether it rains or shines, and the Weather Man doesn't care what you pay for a hat.

But here's a tip—if you can pull on a cap instead of being obliged to put on a hat when the Weather Man puts up the Storm Signals, you can reduce the High Cost of Overhead—and this year every man who wears a hat is trying to cut down his overhead expense, whether he's running a factory or running a flat.



They're all $2 and $2.85

NO CHECKEE, NO WASHEE

ANYTHING that has been through the laundry of public opinion is sure to come out plenty clean.

WHICH is what has happened to every professional sport in the works.

BASEBALL went through the wringer around 1882 when the gumbelers and the wonks by both handles. Prizefighting has been through the mangler. Horse racing has been slapped into the public laundry by many times. There's a few race tracks in the country that could still stand for some nice, lathery soapsuds.

WRESTLING is the last sport that has been cleaned up.

IN the old days you could trust a wrestler about as far as you could throw a fit.

ALL the hippodromers were foreigners with necks like sturdy oaks and heads like acorns. They could pull their collars off over their heads without unbuttoning 'em. The sport didn't appeal to Americans who saw no reason why they should allow a garlic burner to bust their star-spangled ribs up into lagsane patties. The onion exhalers had the game to themselves for years and yanks preferred to bet their dough on loaded checkers, yachts or anything that couldn't whisper.

SOMETIMES contrary demanded that the sports give some distinguished foreign champ the keys to the city. But they always hurried downtown to change their luck.

FINALLY the home boys started to spot the visiting firemen and the sport went to the detouring plant. The American public has been the Chinese in many a twisted deal. But the Chink is the lad who hands out the wash and wrestling had to show a clean bill of health.

No checkee, no washee.

AND all flying coins and moons, wrestling is showing the checkee and is living the washee. The sport has been cleaned up like orphan kids face on the morning of the Board of Trustees' annual visit.

OUTSIDE of pleading with the landlord to fix the roof, wrestling is the most gruelling sport in the loose leaf ledger. You've got to be in snapper trim to wrestle ten minutes than you do to box twenty rounds, play a game of football or baseball, or walk home through a yegg lined boulevard at midnight.

TWO of the premier huggers in the game today are Yanks. Caddock and McCoy, Iowa and Nebraska. That's the "N" of America. Right in the middle of the alphabet.

THERE isn't a chance of wrestling ever replacing boxing as the duke of sports. But the wrestling crowds indicate that the buss are packing the wrestling shows which is equivalent to a vote of confidence from the Board of Trustees.

CADDOCK is from Iowa, where even the cross-eyed girls are pretty. Stecher is from Nebraska, which boasts of the handsomest bowlegged men in the world. The soil is so rich in Nebraska that wheat grows both ways. After harvesting the top crop, the farmers dig another crop out of the ground. Everybody owns two automobiles and wears 'em like roller skates. The Winters are so cold that the mercury drops out of the thermometers and burrows in the ground like goners. It stays there until July and then comes out and perches on a steeple like a sparrow. The Summers are so hot that the hens lay hard boiled eggs.

April Folly

By Cynthia Stockley

A Brilliant New Film Romance With Marion Davies

Watch for This Story in Motion Pictures

"April Folly," soon to be seen in leading motion picture theatres, is a Cosmopolitan production, released through Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as a Paramount-Arteraft picture, direction of Robert Z. Leonard.

What Has Happened So Far

Lady Diana Sandilands, bound for South Africa, manages to lose her chaperone before the tram leaves London and, meeting a charming but poor girl, April Poole, in the rails as carriage, persuades her to exchange identities with her for the period of the voyage only.

"WE must do the thing thoroughly," she insisted, "and I shan't mind sharing in the least. It may be amusing if the other woman is pleasant. I don't think you and I had better know each other too well to begin with, do you? We can pretend to make friends as the voyage goes on. Or shall we say that we were at school together?"

"Let us say as little as possible," said April, who had an objection to telling lies, even little white ones. But Diana did not share her scruples and plainly averred her intention of "planning a yarn" to anyone who asked questions.

In a whirl of excitement they arrived at the docks and were hustled with the rest of the crowd up the steep gangway that led to the deck of the Union-Castle Company's latest and most modern liner, the Clarendon Castle.

April, who had exchanged her cloth coat for Diana's sables, felt the eyes of the world burning and piercing through the costly furs to the secret in her bosom. But Diana felt no such discomfort. Jubilant in her new-found liberty, she paced the decks, inspected the ship, made friends with the first officer and several passengers, and finally went down to lunch in the dining saloon.

She seated herself at the general table, and as a number of merry people were toasting each other farewell in champagne she thought it only fitting to order a half-bottle for herself. Some of the women looked at her curiously, but that did not daunt Diana.

April, placed at some distance in solitary state, noted and envied the coolness and composure of her fellow conspirator. She, too, had meant to be one of the general crowd, but already the news of her rank and state had tickled the ears of the chief steward, and she found herself reverently waylaid and conducted with ceremony to a small table whence she could gaze and be gazed upon by the rest of the world without fear of contamination.

At Captain's Table

She was bothered over the business of sitting at the captain's table. She had seen him on the boat deck as she came aboard and her heart failed her at the thought of deceiving such a genial, kindly-looking man. It was plain that the experiment of "talking people in" was not going to be so priceiessly funny as she had anticipated. She said so to Diana, who came to her cabin as soon as the ship started to make a selection of clothes. But Diana would listen to none of her virtuous backsliding.

"You can't back out now," she said firmly. "A bargain's a bargain, and you told everyone I am April Poole, going to Africa to be a governess, and all the ship knows you are Lady Diana Sandilands. We should be a nuisance for the gods if we changed back now. No one would believe us, either. We'd only be looked upon with suspicion for the rest of the voyage, and all our fun and pleasure spoiled. For goodness' sake, don't be an idiot"

That was all the slightly conscience-stricken April got for her pains, and Diana stalked off triumphant, jugging a suitcase and an armful of wraps. April heard her explaining to a stewardess in the corridor that her baggage had got mixed up with Lady Diana Sandilands' and that it was very awkward, and then she saw and heard no more of her for several days.

For immediately on emerging from the Solent the Clarendon Castle ran into very heavy weather which continued until the Bay of Biscay was passed, keeping all but the hardiest travelers confined to their cabins.

April, who was among the victims, had plenty of solitary leisure in which to repent her misdeed if she felt so inclined. But the impulse to repent soon passed, and works day wisdom reassured her that what she and Diana were doing was really very harmless and of no consequence to anyone but themselves. It was very pleasant, after all, to be waited on and fussed about as though she were a person of infinite importance instead of a shabby little governess.

A Friend of Everyone

Being of a nature neither arrogant nor impatient, she soon endeared herself to the stewardess and serving people, who, having some experience in the tempers and tantrums of fine ladies, were agreeably surprised by her gentle and charming manners and could not do enough for her in return.

After the first few days of frightful illness, she began to feel better and was able to be moved from her cabin to the ladies' lounge. Wrapped in one or other of Diana's ravishing boudoir garments of silk and fur, she was supported there every morning, ensconced on the most luxurious sofa and surrounded by attentions from the other semi-invalids. Nothing was too good for the peer's delightful daughter, and everyone behaved as if she were an angel dropped from heaven.

The ship's doctor, who was young and susceptible, broke it gently to such of the male passengers who were able to hear the strain that a dazzling joy awaited their eye when Lady Diana should be well enough to appear in public.

April knew nothing of these things. She only felt very happy in the kindness of everybody. Sometimes she wondered why the real Diana gave no sign, but came to the conclusion that she, too, had been ill.

It was a natural enough thing to ask the doctor, when they were alone one day, if Miss Poole was among the passengers. He seemed sufficiently astonished by the query.

"Miss Poole?" he echoed. "Oh, no, she's not ill—far from it. Do you know her?"

Cryptic Response

"Certainly I know her," smiled April, astonished in her turn. "I was wondering why she had not been to see me."

The doctor murmured something cryptic about her having "no doubt been too busy," and seemed to have nothing further to say. The face of the lounge stewardess wore a peculiar expression. A quiet, rather austere looking woman, she always behaved like a mummy in the doctor's presence, standing behind him with folded hands and mute lips. But when he had gone she came to life.

"Do you mean the young lady whose baggage got mixed with yours at the beginning of the voyage, my lady?" she asked.

April suddenly remembered the necessity to walk delicately.

"Yes—a pretty, fair girl," she said cautiously. "Very gay and bright."

"Very," agreed the stewardess laconically. Then the source of her eloquence dried up even as the doctor's had done. April began to think it was time to go on deck and see what was doing.

A Glorious Day

The next day was not only glorious day fine, but the ship came to harbor by that island which is as a bouquet of fruit and flowers pinned to a jagged breast. There seems always something sinister lurking behind the wreathed and radiant beauty of Madeira, but to those who come in ships from out the bitter fogs of England, she is a siren with a blue-and-golden smile, and her gin-laden hands are soothing and serene.

"Swanee Shore," a Dreaming Southern Waltz Song

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1920, by International Feature Service, Inc.

"Why should I be worry-ing when anything goes wrong?
Soon I will be hurry-ing down where I belong;
Swanee, you're a part of me,
Ah! I'm a part of you,
So I know there's only one thing left for me to do.
Swanee shore, you are calling me;
Swanee shore, how I long to be down among the cotton and sugar cane.
Where the mocking birds are sweetly singing,
How I long to come back to you,
I'll return when my dreams come true.
And beneath the willow,
I'll make my pillow,
The banks of the Swanee shore."

Here's a song for a Southerner—for the man who holds his knees on the white sand of the Pacific; hears the rustle of palms down the shore, and the voices of tourist children from the ends of the earth. For the Southerner who holds the satin sides of a horse between his knees on the roads of the desert and lifts his eyes to hard, bright blue skies and tenderly, coldly trembling air—that is healthy for a chap's lungs when he's far away from home! For the Southerner who reaps gold in the Far North, and sees his breath stand before him a glittering, frosty cloud lives in his mackinaw, and hears the pine trees sing profundo under their white loads of snow—and the mountain-maple burst with the cold. For the Southerner in the Yankee city—where he must hurry—and if you've ever lived South you'll know how hard it is for him to do that.

For the Southerner from home. A song that dreams about the things he loves and remembers—and longs to see again. A song that drifts slowly and gently like the black-glancing Southern rivers with their islands of pale-blue flowers a-floating down—down. A song with the sunny, quiet opens—a song with the scented, flowery shadows. A song with the languid swing of the gentle gray moss-hangers over idle water. A song with the sweetness of jasmine and honeysuckle. A song that will crush the flavors of the Southland's fruit on his palate and the juice of her dream flowers on his eyelids—and make him dream—and long.

And a song for the Northerner, too—for how many of us does a song of Dixie or Swanee spell Romance—and expectation—and memory, sometimes; of wonderful days and lovable people, of songs and flowers and velvet nights—and time to live!

"Why should I be worrying—when anything goes wrong.
Soon I will be hurrying—down where I belong."

You're always carrying up sheets of music and spreading them out on her piano, to play for you. Better remember this one, too. —NELL BRINKLEY.

THE CINEMA MURDER

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

THE room was beginning to fill with various musicians, a few journalists, a great many men of note in the world of Bohemia kept streaming in. One or two of them nodded to him, several paused to speak.

"Hallo, Ware!" Noel Bridges exclaimed. "Not often you give us a look in. What are you doing with yourself here all alone?"

Philip turned to answer him, and suddenly felt the fire blaze up again. He saw his questioner's frown, saw him even bite his lip as though conscious of having said a tactless thing. The answer probably understood the whole situation well enough.

"I generally go into the Lotus," Philip pled. "Tonight I had a fancy to come here."

"The Lotus is too far up town for us fellows," Bridges remarked. "We need a drink, a little supper, and to see our pals quietly when the night's work is over. I hear great things of the new play, Mr. Ware, but I don't know when you'll get a chance to produce it. Were you in the house tonight?"

"Only for a moment."

"Going stronger than ever," Bridges continued impressively.

"Yes, thanks. I'll take a Scotch high-ball," he added in response to Philip's mute invitation, "plenty of ice, Mick. There wasn't a seat to be had in the house, and I wouldn't like to say what old Fink had to go through before he could get his box for the great Sylvanus."

"His box?" Philip queried.

"The theatre belongs to Sylvanus Power, you know," Bridges explained. "He built it five years ago."

"For a speculation?"

The actor fidgeted for a moment with his tumbler.

"No, for Miss Dalsian," he replied.

Philip set his teeth hard. The temptation to pursue the conversation was almost overpowering. The young man himself, though a trifle embarrassed, seemed perfectly willing to talk. At least it was better to know the truth! Then suddenly there suddenly asserted itself. Whatever he was to know he must learn from her lips and from here only.

"Well, I should think it's turned out all right," he remarked.

Noel Bridges shrugged his shoulders.

"The rent if were figured out at a fair interest on the capital, would be something ridiculous," he declared. "You see, the place was extravagantly built—without any regard to cost. The dressing rooms as you may have noticed, are wonderful, and all the appointments are unique. I don't think the old man's ever had a quarters rent yet that's paid him 5 per cent. on the money. See you later perhaps, Mr. Ware. The young man concluded, setting down his tumbler. "I'm going in to have a grill. Why don't you come?"

Philip hesitated for a second and then, somewhat to the other's surprise, assented. He was conscious that he had been, perhaps, just a little unresponsive to the many courtesies which had been offered him here and at the other kindred clubs. They had been ready to receive him with open arms this little fraternity of brain-workers, and his response had been, perhaps, a little doubtful, not from any lack of appreciation but partly from that curious diffidence, so hard to understand but so fundamentally English and partly because of that queer sense of being an impostor which sometimes swept over him. A sense that he was, after all, only the ghost of another man, living a subjective life; that, reason it out however he might, there was something of the fraud in any personality he might adopt.

And yet, deep down in his heart he was conscious of so earnest a desire to be really one of them, this good-natured, good-hearted, gay-spirited little throng, with their delightful intimacies, their keen interest in each other's welfare, their potent, almost mysterious geniality, which seemed to draw the stranger of kindred tastes so closely under its influence. Philip, as he sat at the long table with a dozen or two other men, did his best that night to break through the fetters, tried hard to remember that his place amongst them, after all, was honest enough. They were writers and actors and journalists. Well he too was a writer.

He had written a play which they had welcomed with open arms, as they had done him. In this world of Bohemia, if anywhere, he surely had a right to lift up his head and breathe—and he would do it. He sat with them, smoking and talking, until the little company began to thin out, establishing all the time a new reputation, doing a great deal to dissipate that little sense of disappointment which his former non-responsiveness had created.

"He's a damned good fellow, after all," one of them declared, as at last he left the room. "He is losing his Britishness every day he stays here."

"Been through rough times, they say," another remarked.

"He is one of those," an elder member pronounced taking his pipe for a moment from his mouth, "who was never made for happiness. You can always read those men. You can see it behind their eyes."

Nevertheless, Philip walked home a saner and a better man. He felt somehow warmed by those few hours of companionship. The senseless part of his jealousy was gone, his trust in Elizabeth re-established. He looked at the note once more as he undressed. At 11 o'clock on the following morning in her rooms"

The Scotch of It.

Sandy and Angus were discussing the merits of their respective regiments, and each was of the opinion that his particular one was far and away the best. "Why," said Sandy, "when our colonel is dismissing us he says to the officers, 'Fall out, gentlemen!'" "That doesn't count for much," said Angus. "If our colonel said that all the regiment would fall out!"

DON'T LET WIFE DIE OF LOCKJAW

Women wear high heels which buckle up their toes and they suffer terribly from corns. Women then proceed to trim the pests, hacking at, but they hardly realize the terrible danger of infection, says a Cincinnati authority.

Corns can easily be lifted out with the fingers if you will get from any drug store a quarter of an ounce of a drug called Freezone. This is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. You simply apply a few drops of Freezone directly upon the tender aching corn. The soreness is relieved at once, and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts out without pain.

This is a sticky substance which dries in a moment. It just shrivels up the corn without inflaming or irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. Put this out and pin on your wife's dresser.—Advertisement.

Nasty Colds

The very first dose opens your clogged-up nostrils and the air passages of your head; stops nose running; relieves the headache, dullness, feverishness, sneezing, soreness, stiffness.

"Pape's Cold Compound" is the quickest, surest relief known and costs only a few cents. It acts without assistance. Tastes nice. Contains no quinine. Insist on Pape's!—Advertisement.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Look years younger! Use Grandmother's recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur and nobody will know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is musssy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

Thousands of well-known downtown druggists say it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Advertisement.

MANY CASES OF RHEUMATISM NOW

Says We Must Keep Feet Dry, Avoid Exposure and Eat Less Meat

Stay off the damp ground, avoid exposure, keep feet dry, eat less meat, drink lots of water and above all take a spoonful of salts occasionally to keep the kidneys active.

Rheumatism is caused by poisonous toxin, called uric acid, which is generated in the body, absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and pass it out in the urine. The pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid, which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, sore nerves and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about three ounces of Jad Salts, put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant effervescent lithia-water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.—Advertisement.

The Two Voices

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

DORIS looked at her appealingly, then followed her to the door. Here Ruth whispered a command.

"Kiss him good-by. Say the correct thing. Then come away."

After which, without a backward glance, Ruth Courtney went from the room and down the stairs.

Slowly Doris returned to her betrothed's side. He smiled as she approached.

"Ruth is all very well in her way, darling," he commented. "But she is not gentle and sympathetic like you. She seems to have changed since I was with her last. I could not help contrasting you two when she came in just now—although her voice is so much like yours that it fairly startled me.

"But her manner is not different, Doris. She is as snappy and brisk and practical! But you are the only really perfect girl in all this world, dear heart."

His sightless eyes were turned toward her. She tried to avoid them. They were uncanny—seeming to see everything and really seeing nothing. She felt almost as if the deception she and Ruth had practiced were detected by this man. Her common sense told her this was a foolish fancy, yet a sudden impulse made her ask:

"Hugh, can't you see anything at all—really, not a thing?"

He winched as if she had struck him. "Not a thing," he hoarsely.

"Poor dear!" she exclaimed. She dropped a hasty kiss on his forehead. "I must go now. Ruth is waiting."

He misinterpreted the agitation in her voice. "Don't be too sorry for me, darling," he advised. "You must not let my misfortune make you unhappy. I have you, you know."

Then, before she could check him, he drew her to him and kissed her again and again.

CHAPTER XXI.

DORIS came into the drawing-room, where, as before, Ruth was waiting for her.

"Well?" the younger sister said.

Ruth stood still, looking at her. She was confronting a problem that seemed too big for her to handle. Hugh's happiness, his health, his life, filled her horizon so completely that she found it difficult to look at anything else in its proper perspective. At last she spoke.

"What is the matter, Doris?"

"It is all so dreadful!" the other moaned.

"Yes," her sister said gently, going to her and laying her hand on the bowed head, "it is very dreadful, dear—but we must think first of all of Hugh."

Doris lifted her head suddenly. "And what about me?" she demanded. "Am I not to be considered?"

Ruth spoke slowly and carefully. "Yes, dear, you are to be very much considered. For your own future, as well as Hugh's, is involved. Moreover, you must remember that Hugh's life or reason may be at stake."

"It is not my fault," the older girl murmured.

"What do you mean?" Ruth demanded.

"I mean that I am not responsible for this awful thing that has happened, and it does not seem quite fair that I should suffer for it, does it, Ruth?"

The Valley of the Giants

By Peter B. Kyne

JOHN CARDIGAN chuckled. "I'd take Buck Ogilvy, Bryce. He'll do. Is he honest?"

"I don't know. He was the last time I saw him."

"Then wire him a hundred. Don't wait for the mail. The steamer that carries your letter might be wrecked and your friend Ogilvy forced to steal."

"I have already wired him the hundred. In all probability he is now out whirling like a dervish."

"Good boy! Well, I think we've planned sufficient for the present, Bryce. You'd better leave for San Francisco tomorrow and close your deal with Gregory. Arrange with him to leave his own representative with Ogilvy to keep tab on the job, check the bills, and pay them as they fall due; and above all things, insist that Gregory shall place the money in a San Francisco bank, subject to the joint check of his representative and ours. Hire a good lawyer to draw up the agreement between you; be sure you're right, and then go ahead—full speed. When you return to Sequoia I'll have a few more points to give you. I'll mull them over in the meantime."

CHAPTER XXII.

WHEN Bryce Cardigan walked down the gangplank at the steamship dock in San Francisco, the first face he saw among the waiting crowd was Buck Ogilvy's. Mr. Ogilvy wore his overcoat and a joyous smile, proving that in so far as he was concerned all was well with the world; he pressed forward and thrust forth a great speckled paw for Bryce to shake. Bryce ignored it.

"Why, don't you remember me?" Ogilvy demanded. "I'm Buck Ogilvy."

Bryce looked him fairly in the eye and favored him with a lightning wink. "I have never heard of you, Mr. Ogilvy. You are mistaking me for someone else."

"Sorry," Ogilvy murmured. "My mistake. Though you were Bill Kerrick who used to be a partner of mine. I'm expecting him on this boat, and he's the speaking image of you."

Bryce nodded and passed on, hailed a taxicab, and was driven to the San Francisco office of his company. Five minutes later the door opened and Buck Ogilvy entered.

"I was a bit puzzled at the dock, Bryce," he explained as they shook hands, "but decided to play safe and then follow you to your office. What's up? Have you killed somebody and are the detectives on your trail? If so, 'rise up and I'll assume the responsibility for your crime, just to show you how grateful I am for that hundred."

"No, I wasn't being shadowed, Buck, but my principal enemy was coming down the gangplank right behind me, and——"

"So was my principal enemy," Ogilvy interrupted. "What does our enemy look like?"

"Like ready money. And if he had seen me shaking hands with you, he'd have suspected a connection between us later on, Buck. You have a good job—about five hundred a month."

"Thanks, old man. I'd work for you for nothing. What are we going to do?"

"Build twelve miles of logging railroad and parallel the line of the old wolf I spoke of a moment ago."

"Good news! We'll do it. How soon do you want it done?"

Secures Manager

"As soon as possible. You're the vice-president and general manager."

"I accept the nomination. What do I do first?"

"Listen carefully to my story, analyze my plan for possible weak spots, and then get busy, because after I have provided the funds and given the word 'Go!' the rest is up to you. I must not be known in the transaction at all, because that would be fatal. And I miss my guess if, once we start building or advertising the building of the road, you and I and everybody connected with the enterprise will not be shadowed day and night by an army of Pinkertons."

When Bryce Cardigan returned to Sequoia, his labors, insofar as the building of the road were concerned, had been completed. His agreement with Gregory of the Trinidad Redwood Timber Company had been signed, sealed and delivered; the money to build the road had been deposited in bank; and Buck Ogilvy was already spending it like a drunken sailor. From now on, Bryce could only watch, wait, and pray.

On the next steamer a surveying party with complete camping equipment arrived in Sequoia, purchased a wagon and two horses, piled their dunnage into the wagon and disappeared up-country. Hardon their heels came Mr. Buck Ogilvy, and occupied the bridal suite in the Hotel Sequoia, arrangements for which had previously been made by wire. In the sitting room of the suite Mr. Ogilvy installed a new desk, a filing cabinet, and a brisk young male secretary.

He had been in town less than an hour when the editor of the Sequoia Sentinel sent up his card. The announcement of the incorporation of the Northern California Outrage (for so had Mr. Ogilvy, in huge enjoyment of the misery he was about to create, dubbed the road) had previously been flashed to the Sentinel by the United Press Association, as a local feature story, and already speculation was rife in Sequoia as to the identity of the hare-brained individuals who dared to back an enterprise as nebulous as the millennium. Mr. Ogilvy was expecting the visit—in fact, impatiently awaiting it; and since the easiest thing he did was to speak for publication, naturally the editor of the Sentinel got a story which, to that individual's simple soul, seemed to warrant a seven-column head—which it received. Having boned up on the literature of the Redwood Manufacturers' Association, what Buck Ogilvy didn't know about redwood timber, redwood lumber, the remaining redwood acreage and marked conditions, past and present, might have been secreted in the editorial eye without seriously hampering the editorial sight.

He stated that the capital behind the project was foreign, that he believed in the success of the project and that his entire fortune was dependent upon the completion of it. In glowing terms he spoke of the billions of tons of timber products to be hauled out of this wonderfully fertile and little-known country, and confidently predicted for the county a future commercial supremacy that would be simply staggering to contemplate.

When Colonel Seth Pennington read this outburst he smiled. That's a bright scheme on the part of that Trinidad Redwood Timber Company gang to start a railroad excitement and unload their white elephant," he declared. "A scheme like that stiffs them with their timber, and I suppose they figure there's a sucker born every minute and that the same old gag might work again. Chances are they have a prospect in tow already."

CHAPTER XXIII.

THOUGH Buck Ogilvy was gone from Sequoia for a period of three weeks, he was by no means forgotten. His secretary proved to be an industrious press agent who by mail, telegraph and long-distance telephone managed daily to keep the editor of the Sequoia Sentinel fully apprised of all developments in the matter of the Northern California Oregon Railroad Company—including some that had not as yet developed! The result was copious and persistent publicity for the new railroad company, and the arousing in the public mind, of a genuine interest in this railroad which was to do so much for the town of Sequoia.

Colonel Seth Pennington was among those who, skeptical at first and inclined to ridicule the project into an early grave, eventually found himself swayed by the publicity and gradually coerced into serious consideration of the results attendant upon the building of the road. The Colonel was naturally as suspicious as a rattlesnake in August; hence he had no sooner emerged from the ranks of the frank scoffers than his alert mind framed the question:

"How is this new road—improbable as I know it to be—going to affect the interests of the Laguna Grande Lumber Company, if the—unexpected should happen and those bunco-steerers should actually build a road from Sequoia to Grant's Pass, Oregon, and thus construct a feeder to a transcontinental line?"

Five minutes of serious reflection sufficed to bring the Colonel to the verge of panic, notwithstanding the fact that he was ashamed of himself for yielding to fright despite his firm belief that there was no reason why he should be frightened. Similar considerations occur to a small boy who is walking home in the dark past a cemetery.

The vital aspects of his predicament dawned on the Colonel one night at dinner between the soup and the fish. So forcibly did they occur to him, in fact, that for the nonce he forgot that his niece was seated opposite him.

"Confound them," the Colonel distinctly, "I must look into this immediately."

"Look into what, Uncle dear?" Shirley asked innocently.

"The new railroad that man Ogilvy talks of building—which means, Shirley, that with Sequoia as his starting point, he is going to build a hundred and fifty miles north to connect with the main line of the Southern Pacific in Oregon."

"But wouldn't that be the finest thing that could possibly happen to Humboldt County?" she demanded of him.

Would Be a Blow

"Undoubtedly it would—to Humboldt County; but to the Laguna Grande Lumber Company, in which you have something more than a sentimental interest, my dear, it would be a blow. A large part of the estate left by your father is invested in Laguna Grande stock, and as you know, all my efforts are devoted to appreciating that stock and fighting against anything that has a tendency to depreciate it."

"Which reminds me, Uncle Seth, that you never discuss with me any of the matters pertaining to my business interests," she suggested.

He beamed upon her with his patronizing and indulgent smile. "There is no reason why you should puzzle that pretty head of yours with business affairs while I am alive and on the job," he answered. "However, since you have expressed a desire to have this railroad situation explained to you, I will do so. I am not interested in seeing a feeder built from Sequoia north to Grant's Pass, and connecting with the Southern Pacific, but I am tremendously interested in seeing a feeder built south from Sequoia toward San Francisco, in connect with the Northwestern Pacific."

RAILROADS TO SPEND BILLION

Outlay Necessary for Equipment in Next Few Months

It is figured that railroads must spend a billion dollars within a few months for equipment, as they need about everything that can be classified under that term. The car shortage is a great handicap to the country's business now and as the latter is steadily expanding the situation will soon become serious.

It is estimated that while 500,000 more freight cars are required the need for 200,000 is imperative. It will take 10,000 new locomotives to haul all the freight that will be offered. Rail needs are placed at not less than 200,000 tons.

MOTOR ISSUES MAKE GAINS

Steels Show Slight Improvement During Quiet Morning Trading

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor

Stocks were steady in New York at noon and the market had a good tone. Prices rallied a point above the highest for the morning. Motors continued leaders in strength, while steels had improved a little. Trading was dull, first hour transactions totalling around 130,000 shares. Call money renewed at 12 per cent. The high rate was a check to operations. In the foreign exchange market weakness prevailed, sterling demand posting sank to $3.49¾, a new low record figure. At 12.34 francs were off 13 centimes and at 5.67 lire had receded 5 centimes. German marks were quoted at .0125.

At its highest General Motors had advanced 2½ to 216¾. Other strong stocks were Studebaker, Pierce Arrow, American Locomotive, Baldwin, American Woolen, Crucible, Pressed Steel Car and Railway Steel Spring. Middle States Oil was weak, showing nearly two points loss when at its lowest. Texas Company was off more than two. Oils were the weakest group.

PRICE MOVEMENT IRREGULAR.

The market was irregular at the opening, but soon became dull. It improved a little quickly but did not develop strength. Fluctuations were over wide in spots, however, and trading itself was of about the same breadth as before this week, activity being confined largely to steels, oils, motors, equipments and here and there a specialty. The public remained on the outside and demand was chiefly from professionals and they bought principally to cover shorts. News of the morning had little influence. Money conditions are unchanged but traders are getting inured to call rate agitations. After the rate got to 18 per cent. yesterday the market rallied. It is said in banking circles that funds have increased somewhat this month over season when cash is usually plentiful—but that business demand is expanding so fast that less is available for speculation in stocks. This is one explanation for the accession of the call rate.

CHANGES IN NEW HIGH.

As was the case the day before, motors were the feature. They had a strong start and retained gains or increased them during the first hour. Chandler attained a new highest record price, General Motors also had a second early gain. Steels had no definite trend, Crucible being strong and U. S. Steel weak. Republic began lower and changed its lose into a gain. International Paper was among the specialty issues. At mid-morning the tone had improved and the market verged on being strong.

It is said to be too early as yet to tell the effect of the rediscount rate advance, as no recent Federal Reserve reports cover a period which could be expected to reflect resulting curtailment of commercial borrowing. It is remarked: "A slight reduction in commercial rediscounts, $10,000,000 was reported in the New York Federal Reserve statement last week, but the volume of such rediscounts still shows a tremendous expansion over previous weeks. On the other hand, there is no contraction shown in commercial rediscounts for the entire country. The volume last week represented record figures. The situation in this particular is quite different from what it was a year ago when a steady and substantial contraction in commercial discounts throughout the country was going on."

LOCAL LIST IS IRREGULAR

Trading Dull on Exchange; Oils Higher on the Curb

Prices were irregular on the Boston Stock Exchange at the opening and later and trading was dull and narrow. Weakling and new characteristic this morning. Packing house issues were weak, which was true of coppers also. Auto accessory shares were neglected during the forenoon. American Telephone was strong and active, being up more than a point at its highest. It sold at par. Carson Hill opened a shade lower and afterwards showed a small gain. Superior & Boston was off a fraction.

Among issues to show gains in trading were Torrington and Amoskeag. Fractional advances were made by Massachusetts Gas United Fruit, New England Telephone, Ohio Body and Waltham Watch.

Stocks to recede a point or more included Fairbanks, Quincy, Seneca, Pleasant Stranahan, Swift & Co. and Swift International. Smaller losses were sustained by Calumet & Arizona, Copper Range, New Haven, United Shoe, National Leather, Eastern Manufacturing, Wildcat and Venture. Swift International was off 2¾ at 51¼ at the end of the morning.

CURB HAS FIRM START.

The Curb market was firm at the start, and Filgrim and Arizona Tip Top were the early features. Tip Top opened with a gain at 4¾. Filgrim advanced 2 cents to 30 cents, but soon lost the gain. High-priced oils were higher as a class. There was not much price movement to silvers.

Among gains at the end of an hour were Tip Top, 5; at 4; Arizona Extension, 4 cents at 22 cents; Silver Reef, 3 cents at 32 cents; Gilliland, 1⅛ at 44; Simms Petroleum, 1 at 28⅛, and White Oil, ⅛ at 36. Arizona Silver was off ⅛ at 3⅞.

BOSTON FINANCIAL NOTES.

Sentiment is better in copper metal selling circles. It is being stated that the resale movement of the Metallic Extraction Co. of Boston has been reduced from 35 to 28 cents. The reports made at the annual meeting of stockholders show business activities in all directions. Deposits have increased from $6,200,000 to $9,007,000 in a year, a gain of $2,800,000 for 1919, and of which more than 70% was in the commercial department.

Retail strength of Sumatra and Boston is largely based upon expectation that it will rule a high body of ore on the sixth level of its property. Production of the mine so far has averaged 9% copper and twenty ounces of silver to a ton.

Daniel M. Bates has resigned as agent of the Lawrence Bleachery and Dye works.

The Weskanut Mills, Inc., a new Massachusetts corporation capitalized at $1,000,000, is offered by Jacob F. Brown of Boston as president and Harry Whitney of Newton as treasurer. The directors comprise Spanish-born Jacob Del Abel, Albert I. Cushing, Harry H. Daw, Albert S. Howe and Charles W. Whitney.

Foreign Textile Mills Busy

Increased exports of raw American cotton show that European textile mills are getting back to normal production. Demand for cotton from this source is constantly increasing although high exchange rates have tremendously increased costs to foreign buyers. According to Department of Commerce preliminary figures, December cotton exports amounted to 876,842 bales, an increase of 283,358 as compared with shipments during the corresponding month of 1918.

IT'S WHITE

WORKINGMEN: If a friend came to you and told you where you could invest $100 and get six times the value in it and, besides, increase the principal six times, and you did it, you would call that WHITE, wouldn't you?

If 600 friends came to you and told you the same thing, you would call them WHITE.

We represent those friends, 600 skilled workmen like yourself. We have been shown that the above statement is a true and reasonable expectation; that the proposition is WHITE in every sense of the word. You are urged to join us in our purpose of making money for the WORKINGMEN.

There is about 1 chance in 100 that you may lose your money. There are about 99 chances in 100 that you may win $6 for each dollar invested, or six times the usual interest rate. Is the GAIN worth the CHANCE? Come in now while the price is 80c. Call and see a DEMONSTRATION. Office is open Saturday afternoon and evening.

Germany Shipping Potash

Germany is resuming shipment of potash, this commodity being one of its most saleable products. A cargo of 3000 tons has just been received at Philadelphia direct from Hamburg. This is the first to reach that port from such a source since Germany was blockaded early in the war.

Cotton Market Opening

New York, Jan. 30.—Irregularity prevailed at the opening of the cotton market, months showing a decline of 9 to 18 points, while others were 4 to 26 points higher, influenced by foreign trade buying and upward from interested interests. The latter also sold resp deliveries. Reactions of about 10 points followed on weakness in foreign exchange and selling by Wall Street, but later the list rallied and at the end of twenty minutes was back to about the best level. Opening prices were: March, 36.40; May, 34.53; July, 32.45; October, 29.90; December, 29.55.

Chicago Grain Market

Chicago, Jan. 30.—Corn opened to 2 higher, Oats opened 3c higher. Provisions opened unchanged to higher. Opening prices were: Corn—January, 1.43¾ to 1.45; May, 1.36¾ to 1.36¾; July, 1.28 to 1.28⅛. Oats—May, 85⅝ to 85¾. Pork—May, 30.05. Lard—May, 25.30. July, 25.75.

ACTION URGED ON WAR BONUS

Chicago Congressman Demands Immediate Legislation on Hearst Newspapers' Plan

Washington, Jan. 30.—Representative John W. Rainey, Democrat, of Chicago, made a strong plea for immediate action on legislation granting extra compensation to the men and women who saw service in the world war, in a speech in the House.

The best plan yet suggested, he said, was the six months' bonus proposed by the Hearst newspapers.

Representative Gould, Republican, of Iowa, chairman of the appropriations committee, said Secretary of the Treasury Glass is opposed to any bonuses.

Rainey replied that he did not know whether Secretary Glass had so expressde himself, but that if he had it was no alibi for Good, as chairman of the appropriations committee.

End Attacks on Our Rights by Organizing Party Devoted to Genuine Americanism

Labor union circles are discussing the use of the general strike as a protest against the expulsion of the five New York Socialists, if the Assembly is idiotic enough to go that far.

The politicians who hatched this attack upon the right of representation certainly have small brains and small loyalty to the Constitution of the United States and to our American spirit and institutions.

Still, a strike is not the way to correct this wrong.

The way to correct this is to start a new party, a Constitutional party, a party that believes in American institutions, that respects the laws, that reverences the Declaration of Independence and the guarantees of the Constitution;

That stands honestly and sincerely for liberty and democracy, the things we fought for abroad and are endeavoring to destroy here at home;

A party which is a conservative party in the highest sense in its desire and determination to conserve the spirit and determination to conserve the spirit and the letter of our Declaration of Independence, of our Constitutional Bill of Rights, and of the examples and injunctions of all our great Presidents and public men up to the time of the present administration;

A party which is opposed to revolution—to either the revolution of radicalism or the revolution of reaction;

A party which is not willing to deliver the government into the hands of extremists of poverty and ignorance or of wealth and selfishness;

A party which believes in continuing the principles and the high purposes, the plans and policies, the means and methods, the republican forms and democratic fundamentals which have made this country the greatest country in the world, the most prosperous country in the world, the freest country in the world until the ranting reds of radicalism and the sordid communists of wealth and privilege started out to undermine our government and destroy our democracy, each class with its batch of stupid, selfish, revolutionary ideas.

Of the two classes, the communists of wealth and privilege are the most dangerous because they are the most powerful and because their lawlessness breeds lawlessness in nearly every other class.

If we are going to deport the men who stand on soap-boxes and preach anarchy, we ought to deport some high financiers and some subservient politicians whose illegal, unconstitutional, un-American acts CREATE anarchy and ARE anarchy.

If this country is to remain a republic, the next Ark that sails should contain a proportion of corrupt privilege seekers and crooked politicians.

If we are to preserve our democracy, maintain our Americanism, guard our liberties and restore respect for the Constitution and all our American institutions, we should start a truly American party, a truly democratic party, a truly republican party, for both of the old parties have lost their democracy, lost their republicanism, lost their Americanism, and are nothing but shells that shelter the hermit-crabs of wealth and privilege, nests that hatch the cuckoos' eggs of tyranny.

Let's Keep American Dollar the Best Money in World

There is much talk about the falling value of pounds, francs, lire and marks.

You can hear any variety of explanation and opinion you want to—some of them sensible, some extraordinarily silly.

The credit of a nation and the value of its money are two different things.

A nation may have wealth enough to make its credit good in large figures, and its money may be so bad that nobody wants it.

Under a system that is simply a survival of primitive times and which ought long since to have been discarded by intelligent nations, the value of the money of civilized peoples is based upon its convertibility into metal—gold or silver or both—but chiefly gold.

The United States dollar is the best piece of currency of equal denomination in the world, simply because the United States is best prepared to back up its paper money with gold.

In other words, badly as our currency is inflated, it is not nearly so inflated as is British currency, French currency, Italian currency and German currency.

The exchanges will get back to normal only in the event that all the principal nations deflate their currencies to normal quantity.

Whichever nation has the greatest quantity of paper currency in disproportion to its metal reserves will have the cheapest money and will have to pay most for exchange.

Transfers of securities and the like operations are mere temporary palliatives. They are not cures, and they cannot be.

Deflation will take time.

Our foreign friends are keen to have America throw its vast wealth and vaster credit into a common pool—in other words, to get our shoulders under their debts.

We should be great fools to do anything of the kind.

The chances are that we could not save them from bankruptcy, while we would almost certainly share in their bankruptcy.

If we attend to our own business and work hard and save and cut down extravagance in taxation and public expenditures, we can weather the financial storm and emerge from the deluge the greatest and most invincible power on earth.

The commercial and financial domination for which the European powers fought their insane war—no matter what they may have had hypocritically said about altruistic motives—will pass into our hands merely by the irresistible force of events, if we simply have sense enough to sit tight and wait.

More Truth Than Poetry

The Pursuit of Happiness

By S. E. KISER

SOME men look into hazel eyes and learn to hope anew;
For some the lure of dusky orbs, and some prefer them blue;
For some the charm of raven locks, some like an auburn hue,
And some men swear by golden hair and keep their pledges true.

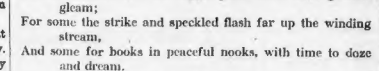
But what care I how dark or light
Her eyes or hair may be
If all the genial world is bright
Because she praises me?

FOR some the joys that money brings, for some the limelight's glare;
And some men still are gladdened by the uniforms they wear.
For some the lure of distant isles, for some the chance to dare,
And some men burn to overturn and rip and slash and tear.

But let the sexton ring his bell,
The sailor sail his sea,
If I am glad in doing well
The task assigned to me.

FOR some the roaring cities where Hope smiles through smoke and steam,
And some would seek the rugged peak where silent glaciers gleam;
For some the strike and speckled flash far up the winding stream,
And some for books in peaceful nooks, with time to doze and dream.

But Paradise is anywhere
My chance to serve may be,
If I may help to banish care
And keep my spirit free.



A MISTAKE SOMEWHERE

"Your uncle tells me that he is a self-made man."

"If he is, Aunt Lucy has been telling me a lot of things that can't be true."

NO REASON TO BE WORRIED

"John, hurry! Telephone for the doctor. The baby has swallowed a quarter!"

"Don't get excited, dear. You can't buy anything for a quarter any more, anyhow."

PASSING A GIVEN POINT

It takes a lifetime to become wise, but a man can make a fool of himself in a minute.

NINE HOUSES. AND ONE saloon. AND A well-worn road. FROM SOMEWHERE else. THAT SEEMED to end. AT A hitching post. AT THE barroom door. AND FROM the north. AND FROM the south. AND EAST and west. CAME ROLLING miles. OF PRAIRIE land. ALL GLISTENING white. WITH WINTER snows. AND A Winter sun. AND FROM every house. CAME A shaft of smoke. THAT WENT straight up. IN THE bitter cold. OF THE great outdoors. AND A lone man stood. AS THE train sped by. AND CLAPPED his hands. TO KEEP them warm. AND A fluttering thing. ON THE barroom door. TURNED INTO crepe. SO THAT we knew. IN THE little town. THERE WAS humor left. IN SPITE of the death. OF BARLEYCORN. AND IN spite of the fact. THAT WHERE it lay. WAS MILE on mile. FROM SOMEWHERE else. AND THAT trains roared through. WITH ALL their warmth. AND BRILLIANT lights. AND ALL their wealth. AND NEVER stopped. AND THE last of the town, THAT WE could see. AS THE train went on. WAS A prairie mound. A WHITE-FENCED place. WITH A dozen graves. AND THAT was all. AND I don't know. IF IT was the graves. OR THE closed saloon. WITH ITS mourning crepe. OR WHAT it was. BUT ALL afternoon. I SAT me here. IN MY big plush seat. AND PICTURES have come. AND THE one that stayed. WAS THAT of a man. FROM SOMEWHERE east. OR SOMEWHERE south. AND I see him there. AND HE goes away. AND BRINGS a mate. AND I see her there. IN THAT desolate place. AND SEE the saloon. AND THE miles of snow. AND THE roaring trains. THAT NEVER stop. AND WISTFUL eyes. THAT LOOK to the south. AND THEN a mound. IN THE white-fenced place.

I THANK you.

INVENTORS ARE GIVEN A FEW TIPS

By Garrett P Serviss

MANY would-be inventors, not all young, come to me for things that I cannot give them. These are not, in most cases, the things that they actually ask for, but simply the things that they are really after. Two of the most important of them are money, and assistance in inventing. While I cannot give these I can give what I think may be useful—some commonplace advice about things that the young inventor ought to avoid.

Don't Ask for Loan

First, don't ask somebody to furnish you with money to enable you to perfect your invention; for nobody will do it. You cannot expect any pecuniary assistance as long as the invention is not completed and when you have completed it, or think you have, nobody is likely to bear for you the expense of proving that it will work. These are things that the inventor must count upon taking on his own shoulders. They may constitute a hardship sometimes, but that hardship is a part of the price of success.

Second, don't try to get somebody to blow a horn for you, to attract the attention of the public. Such advertisement would do you no good if you could get it. The public is only interested in what already succeeds, and the rich investors at whom you are really aiming in your attempt at publicity, will shy alike experienced trout at your lure. If your invention works, and if it meets a need, it will blow its own horn. The regular methods of publicity are the only ones worth while.

Depend on Yourself

Third, don't expect somebody else to get you out of your difficulties. The most altruistic person in the world will not take a great deal of interest in helping another man to invent a new thing, and experience shows that partnership in invention is the poorest kind of partnership.

Fourth, don't think that you have made an invention because a plan of it on paper looks as though it ought to work. The machine is the thing, and the only thing.

Let England Know

Editor Boston American:

If the Boston American never does another worthy act as long as it exists, the editorial entitled, "Some Plain Truths Expressed in Plain American Language," justifies its existence for ever. Now is the time to let England know that we have not forgotten 1775, the Boston Tea Party, or the Battle of Bunker Hill.

AN AMERICAN READER.

Complains of Tax

Editor Boston American:

Do you or do you not call it (the income tax) an injustice to ex-service men, who for months faced many hardships combined with stringent financial conditions that were bound to arise on the small pay of $30 a month? Now being discharged and having secured positions enabling us to finance our way back to normal conditions, we are confronted with an obstacle which is causing us a great deal of dissatisfaction.

JACK DALLON.

Suggests a Mortgage

Editor Boston American:

Surely the United States of America is not magnanimous enough to lend its money without receiving interest for same? I suggest that we Americans take a mortgage on England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales as security against loss. Give them twenty-five years to pay the bill. If they do not pay up, foreclose the mortgage.

"For All Time" Is Risky Tomorrow Is Another Day We Do Not See the Earth Preparedness Not Everything

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1920.

Mr. Gompers, celebrating his seventieth birthday, condemns Bolshevism, completely, finally and for all time."

That sounds like a good old fashioned excommunication such as the Dutch synagogue fastened upon Spinoza, who didn't mind.

If Mr. Gompers defined Bolshevism correctly his condemnation, "for all time," is probably sound. But, "eternal" condemnations are always risky. The theory that the earth went around the sun was condemned for all time as false and sinful, contradicting Ecclesiastes, "the earth standeth fast forever."

Nevertheless, as Galileo remarked, "she moves."

Anaesthetic surgery was condemned for all time on the ground, that using chloroform to save men from pain that God desired to inflict was wrong.

About three hundred years ago, a Scotch lady of rank, Eufame Macalyan, was buried alive on the castle hill of Edinburgh. Her crime was, "seeking the aid of Agnes Sampson for relief of pain at the birth of her two sons." Now, quite calmly, we discuss "twilight sleep," alleged to eliminate the pain of childbirth.

The sewing machine at first was condemned "eternally" because "poor sewing women, unable to earn a living would starve to death."

Improved machinery for making cotton goods had to be operated in fortified factories. The English condemned it eternally, on the ground that it would put them out of work. Instead it clothed them, increased their pay and increased employment.

Mr. Gompers remembers the hostility of printers, very intelligent men, to the first typesetting machines. Their imaginations saw girls setting type for five dollars a week and printers starving. No printer today would choose the old wooden case.

The Russian idea of Soviet government, with trades selecting lawmakers and the old false assumption that the mass rule, which they never do, may in the long run work as well for Russia as other governments have worked in other countries. There is no need to get excited, "completely, finally and for all time," because Bolshevist government kills its enemies when it catches them. Today the French government is built on revolution that killed enemies in thousands, men and women alike. British government, which for Englishmen comes nearest to free government, got its start when Cromwell decided to get along without Charles the First.

As for our own beloved country, if you think it started on a gentle basis, read Fiske and other historians. Birth is painful and revolution is the birth of government. Don't judge the baby finally, even the Bolshevist baby, until it is dressed up and starts growing.

Lucky Clemenceau, beaten for the presidency, starts traveling in Egypt. Fortunate he who escapes from harness in old age, takes his eyes from the ground to which we are all chained, and for a few years looks at the sky above and the earth around him. The majority of us come out of that earth and go back into it never really seeing it.

We live fastened to the treadmill of our foolish pictures, needless accumulation of involuntary wage slavery. You can count on your fingers the really free men and women you know.

Rider Haggard says England's middle classes are on the road to ruin.

Working people, it seems, are getting too much of what they produce. Sad situation. It may comfort the middle classes to remember they have had the buttered side of bread for a long time.

Mr. Kimball of New York circulates a little pamphlet showing France in a bad way because mechanics and other workers get so much that not enough is left for profit on investment to build new factories. How would it be to let well-paid workers invest surplus earnings in stock of investment companies owned by them, and let those companies build new factories with workers' funds? Or would that be Bolshevism?

Preparedness is important, but isn't everything. For instance, two days ago Glenn Young, successful hunter for deserters, arrived in Columbia, S. C., bringing eleven prisoners. One of them, Walter D. Goss, had 204 rounds of ammunition, brass knuckles, one repeating rifle, one 44-calibre Colts revolver, one 32-calibre automatic. He had not used the brass knuckles or fired a shot. To make preparation valuable you must be willing to fight. All the ammunition in the world wouldn't keep an American, Italian, English, Irish, French or German army from overrunning the hundreds of millions of water-drinking vegetarians that live in India.
